MOTHER SOON FINDS HIM
When Frank Butler, 3, shown here with his smilingest face and his mother, Mrs. Nora Butler, was kidnaped from his Roxbury home, his older brother, William, 9 (inset), lost no time in telling his mother, who found the missing boy at the kidnaper's house in Somerville.

TOM O'ROURKE, prize fighter promoter, offers Jack Dempsey one million dollars to fight Wills, a negro. Dempsey says he can't consider that just now, but may arrange through Mr. Rickard to fight Mr. Tunney, a white man. In fact, the discussion bores him.

Make your little boy a prize fighter, not a university professor, if you want him to make money easily.

AN ASSOCIATED PRESS despatch from Denver, in the Pueblo Chieftain, announces the drafting of an amendment to the State Constitution that would tax church property. It reads: "Lots and buildings thereon used exclusively for religious worship shall NOT BE EXEMPT FROM TAXATION." The change in Colorado's Constitution is drafted by Barney Haugey, single taxer. It will probably not be adopted, nor will a modified proposition, which would compel any church selling its property for profit to pay back taxes with interest, be adopted, in all probability, churches and schools, tax free for so long, will probably remain tax free.

GAMBLERS ARE HUNTED AS LEADERS IN ANCIENT 'WIRE-TAPPING' SWINDLE

A well known man-about-town, habitue of Back Bay hotel lobbies, is sought by headquarters inspectors and Back Bay police in connection with the theft of $25,000 from Felix von Taussig, wealthy young Austrian importer, who was "taken" via the "sure-thing" wire-tapping route.

The man wanted by the police as brains of the fake wire-tappers who showed von Taussig a "paper" profit of $50,000 from wagers and then made a getaway with $25,000 which he produced to show good faith, is notorious for his participation in similar schemes throughout the country.

His associates are said to be well-known local gamblers and "con" men.

The method by which Felix and $25,000 were divorced is so ancient that detectives had almost forgotten it.

Felix was in a Boston hotel. His mannerisms, his clothes and his apparent loneliness attracted a stranger, who desired that Felix should meet his three friends. Felix did.

They went to a poolroom in Back Bay and there Felix met a man who, because of his "connection with a large telegraph company obtained advance information on the horse races."

They bet on several races, Felix conservatively, and the advance "dope" was fruitful. Felix always won.

And then the great Kentucky Derby. It was run while Felix was still in Boston, and the advance report he got convinced him he had

MUTINEERS AT BAY IN JAIL BULL PEN

Cleveland, May 20 (A.P.).—The inside of the County Jail here was in a state of siege today, with fifty prisoners barricaded in the bull pen, defying efforts of deputies and guards to put them back in their cells.

The mutiny began after a visit of the grand jury investigating charges of profiteering and underfeeding against Sheriff Fred Kohler. Officials said the situation was well in hand, but other reports told of prisoners armed with bowls and parts of benches and tables threatening guards who waited outside the bull pen all night unable to get in.

The mutineers, the reports said, were clamoring for food.

The grand jury has questioned "Louie the Pieman" Sagora, former prisoner, who previously said he had acted as chief sales agent for the sheriff, who charged him $1 a day rent for a cell used as a storeroom for the pies, tobacco and candy on which, he said, a daily profit of $30 to $40 was made.

KIDNAPER OF BOY, 3, HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Sanford Fairbanks, thirty-two, of Trull street, Somerville, arrested on a charge of kidnaping after he carried off little Frank Butler, three, from his home at No. 7 Cunard street, Roxbury, pleaded guilty in Roxbury Court today and was held in $5,000 for the Grand Jury.

Fairbanks, a former lodger at the Butler home, was arrested when police broke into his home and found the baby playing on the floor. Mrs. Nora Butler, mother of the child, was at work when the alleged kidnaping took place. Another son, William, nine, ran to her place of employment and told her that Fairbanks had taken little Frank away in a truck. She notified police at Roxbury Crossing Station. Four policemen, three from Roxbury Crossing and one from Somerville, wound the child in Fairbank's home after he refused them admission.

UNION LABOR, ATTENTION!

Although the cigar strike has been settled, hundreds of cigarmakers have not gone to work because some of the big Boston cigar manufacturers have been making Non-Union Cigars in New York and Pennsylvania. This is not true of the Elcho Cigar, where Union Cigarmakers are back at work.

Union Labor should stand by its friends. Not only should we buy Elcho Cigars because of their consistent stand for Union principles but because of their insistence in employing Local labor all the time. Only in this way can we show that Union Labor support is worth while.

Respectfully yours,
James T. Moriarty

'HER LIPS HONEY TO CANDY KING'

Lillian Forsaith whose lon lingerie kisses given to Charles N. Shaw, Boston millionaire candy king, were detailed at the trial today of efforts to break Shaw's will. It was during vacations at Loon Lake that the kissing was done, Miss Amelia Lunardini said. At the time Miss Forsaith was "counter girl" in Shaw's store. She has been described at the trial as "Shaw's favorite."

DRYS TO FIGHT TEST VOTE IN NEW YORK

Albany, N. Y., May 20 (I.N.S.)—Prohibition forces throughout the State today were making plans to attack the constitutionality of the bill approved by Governor Smith which provides for a referendum at this Fall's election on the question of whether the State should ask Congress to modify the Volstead law.

Assemblyman Edmund B. Jenks of Broome, leader of the dry forces in the Legislature, and other dry lawyers throughout the State, claim they can prevent the submission of the prohibition question to the voters through court action.

Before the bill was passed Louis Marshal of New York, noted constitutional lawyer, declared the proposal invalid. It has been reported at the capital that the prohibition forces intended to retain Marshall to fight their court battle.

Although the referendum bill was

'CANDY KING' BOUGHT DAINTY LINGERIE FOR GIRL, SAYS WITNESS

Charles N. Shaw, late Boston candy king, selected and purchased silken fluffies, known to the ads as "underthings," for Lillian Forsaith, one of his counter girls, and exchanged long kisses with her in the back seat of an auto, it was testified in Superior Court today.

This testimony was given in the Shaw will fight by Miss Amelia Lunardini of the North End, manager of the Keswick Candy Company, who said she rode in the front seat of the car, beside the chauffeur, during the kiss-featured rides about Loon Lake.

Not only did the candy king buy the silken pretties for Miss Forsaith, the witness testified, but on a New York trip he bought dresses, coats and hats for her and told her to take anything she liked, and charge it to him.

Shaw's will, in which he left bequests to the former Miss Forsaith, now Mrs. I. Harold Angell, and her husband, is being contested by Mrs. Effie P. Lighthipe of Orange, N. J., a first cousin, who alleges undue influence.

Under examination by Robert Murchie, counsel for the contestants, Miss Lunardini testified that although Lillian Forsaith was invited to Loon Lane with Shaw, the candy

VARE MAN LOSING RACE FOR GOVERNOR

Philadelphia, May 20 (A.P.).—John S. Fisher, candidate of the Mellon-Pepper forces, took the lead today from Edward E. Beidleman, who had the support of Congressman William S. Vare, for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. With 383 districts missing the returns showed Fisher 5,946 ahead. The vote was: Fisher, 609,862; Beidleman 603,916.

Returns from districts in Allegheny County, which had not reported previously, and from outlying sections of other Western Pennsylvania counties were mainly responsible for the gain in the Fisher total.

Of the districts still out 101 were in Allegheny County and the others in various counties, mainly in the rural districts.

Beidleman had been leading steadily since the tabulation of the votes began at the close of the polls Tuesday night, but his vote dwindled as the figures of many interior counties showed Fisher pluralities.

Washington, May 20 (A.P.).—Expenditures for candidates in the Pennsylvania Republican primary campaign probably will be among the first probed by the Senate Committee authorized to investigate all primary and election campaigns this year.

The committee, appointed by Vice-President Dawes, is made up of Senators Reed of Pennsylvania and Deneen of Illinois, Republicans; Reed of Missouri and Bayard of Delaware, Democrats, and La Follette of Wisconsin, Insurgent. The Missouri Democrat is expected to head the committee.

His resolution had been pending some time, and he snapped up the opportunity to get action on it during a squabble that started when Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, cited published reports placing expenditures in the Pennsylvania primary campaign at $2,000,000 to $5,000,000.

EDWIN F. ATKINS IS DEAD IN BELMONT

Edwin F. Atkins, dean of the American sugar industry, former president of American Sugar Refining Company, and Punta Alegre Sugar Company, died at his home in Belmont today.

Mr. Atkins returned from Cuba Sunday and underwent an operation in Belmont on Tuesday, from which he failed to rally.

He had been in poor health all Winter.

He was born Jan. 13, 1850, and is survived by his widow, by a son, Robert W. Atkins, and a daughter, Mrs. William H. Claflin, Jr.

As a boy Mr. Atkins learned the sugar trade by serving an apprenticeship in the Boston offices and warehouses and then going to Cuba to work under a Spanish merchant. In the course of years he became the reputed owner of one-tenth of the entire Cuban sugar crop and business interests, rebellions and other matters kept him constantly in travel between Boston and the plantations.

He was prominent also in the Union Pacific Railway, of which he was at one time a director; the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, which he served as president and director; Aetna Mills, Boston Wharf Company, West End Railway, Second National Bank, Shireffs Worsted Company and other concerns, and was a trustee of the Belmont Savings Bank.

Because of an interest in botany he created the Atkins fund for tropical research at Harvard. In 1911 Mayor John F. Fitzgerald appointed him to the Boston art commission.

man did not invite Miss Forsaith's then fiance, Angell.

Q.—While there, whether or not you went on auto trips during the day, with Lillian and Mr. Shaw? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was her conduct toward him and his toward her? A.—They always sat in the back seat. They were very affectionate.

Q.—Well, what did they do? A.—He'd kiss her. She would kiss him. They held hands.

Q.—Now, at one time, whether there was an episode concerning a Miss Blaisdell in Mr. Shaw's place? A.—That was in 1911, I think. Miss Blaisdell was working there.

"PEOPLE WERE TALKING."

Q.—What did Lillian say to Shaw about Miss Blaisdell? A.—She told him that some people were doing a lot of talking.

Q.—What did he say? A.—He said that he would straighten that out.

Q.—What was done, if you know? A.—The next day a letter was sent to the different employes. It was from Mr. Shaw and it was signed by him. Some of the employes read it.

Q.—What happened to Miss Blaisdell after that? A.—It was said that she was doing a lot of talking and later she was discharged.

Q.—At the time you were in New York with Lillian and Mr. Shaw on business trips, how was Lillian dressed when she kissed Shaw good night? A.—She was dressed in her kimona.

ANNOYED BY HAROLD.

Q.—Referring to the Summer of 1921, did you see Shaw at that time? A.—Yes, I saw him in the 7-Oils office.

Q.—What did Shaw say, if anything, to you at that time about Lillian? A.—He said he didn't like the idea of her going around with Harold. He said he was disgusted.

Q.—Did he say anything else? A.—He said he was never going to do any more for them.

Q.—Who was he talking about when he said "them?" A.—Lillian and Harold.

Q.—Did you ever go out to the Arlington house before Shaw left and when Angell was there? A.—Yes, I think it was once.

DICTATED GIFTS.

Q.—In reference to Christmas presents that Mr. Shaw gave to you and different people, did Miss Forsaith say anything about that? A.—Well, Lillian would say to whom she wanted to give gifts and what she wanted for them—the people she wanted gifts given to.

Q.—Was that on more than one Christmas? A.—Every year.

Q.—At one time, whether there was a case about a Mr. Burgess saying what Mr. Shaw did? A.—Just before the Keswick Candy Company started, Lillian, Mr. Burgess and I were in the subway train, going to Cambridge. We were talking about buying stock in the company and Mr. Burgess said Mr. Shaw wanted him to take $20,000 in stock. Lillian said that was not much. Mr. Burgess said to Lillian, "It is not much to you, Lillian, but it's a whole lot to me."

Q.—Did you go back to the office after going to Cambridge? A.—Yes.

Q.—What happened then! A.—When we got back to the factory I saw Lillian talking with Mr. Shaw. Then Mr. Shaw told Burgess to wash some pots and pans. Mr Burgess said he was not there to do that kind of work. Mr. Shaw said: "All right, put on your hat and coat and get out."

CHIDED BY LIGHTHIPE.

Miss Lunardini was questioned as to her presence at the annual meeting of the Cheswick Candy Company officers, at which Lillian Forsaith was discharged. Witness admitted she was present and that a Mr. Goodwin also was there.

Q.—What did Mr. Goodwin say? A.—He spoke about the way the company was formed. He was talking with Mr. Lighthipe.. He said that it was not done properly.

Q.—What did Mr. Lighthipe say? A.—He replied that Mr. Goodwin should have said something before.

Q.—During this conversation were Mr. Goodwin and Mr. Lighthipe excited? A.—Yes. They both talked loudly and were excited.

Q.—Did Miss Forsaith and Mr. Goodwin go out together? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Lillian ever come back? A.—No.

OFFERED HOUSE TO GIRL.

Witness was asked again concerning the places shre visited with Shaw and Mis Forsaith. In response, the witness said Lillian was shown several houses by Shaw and was told that if she liked one of them she could hire it.

Q.—Who assigned the rooms at the house? A.—Lillian always made arrangements for the guests.

Q.—While Mr. Angell and Lillian were at Brant Rock in 1921, did Mr. Shaw ever say anything obtu them? A.—Yes. He said Harold would never amount to much.

Samuel Hoar, counsel for the estate, then took the witness in cross-examination and asked her to draw a second-flood plan of the Winchester house. Miss Lunardini blushed and declared she could not draw. They compromised on her agreement to describe the location of the rooms.

Q.—How many rooms were in the Winchester house on the second floor? A.—I saw three bedrooms and one bathroom.

WHOLE FAMILY THERE.

Q.—Is it not true that Mr. and Mrs. Forsaith (Lillian's parents), Mrs. Wilkins (Lillian's sister), her two brothers and grandmother Forsaith, were living there with Mr. Shaw and Lillian? A.—I believe so.

Q.—At No. 19 Upland road, Arlington: who lived there? A.—Mr. and Mrs. Forsaith, Earle Forsaith, a brother, Lillian and Mr. Shaw. The other brother and Mrs. Wilkins were not there.

sponsored by two Republicans, it was passed in the Legislature only because every Democratic member voted for it.

There has been a persistent report that the referendum measure was permitted to go through the Legislature by the Republican leaders only because Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., a wet Republican insisted it be approved. Senator Wadsworth will be a candidate for re-election.

Foes of prohibition say the referendum will be approved by a vote of at least three or four to one.

Dry officials frankly admitted that Representative Vare's victory in the Pennsylvania Republican Senatorial primary, and Governor Al Smith's approval of the State-wide prohibition referendum in New York promised additional difficulties in enforcing the dry law.

These officials always have maintained that without effective State co-operation the task of enforcement was exceedingly difficult.

Police Probing Mystery Surrounding Shooting; Victim Was but Slightly Hurt

Lowell, May 20.—Shot by her husband in her home, No. 47 Tyler street, Mrs. Marie L. Chapdelaine is resting comfortably in St. John's Hospital while police are continuing investigation of the affair.

Mrs. Chapdelaine's story of the shooting is that she was cleaning a .38-calibre revolver and that the weapon was accidentally discharged, a bullet entering the left thigh. Alberic Chapdelaine, the woman's husband, was present and it was when he atempted to take the gun from her, to do the cleaning himself, that the shot was fired, according to his version.

Police Sergeant Frank L. Maloney and Patrolmen Patrick H. Begley and Francis M. O'Loughlin questioned Chapdelaine in his home after the shooting and later at police headquarters.

He told the officers he entered the house while Mrs. Chapdelaine was cleaning the barrel of the revolver. He approached her and took the gun from her, he said, fearing she might discharge the weapon and injure herself.

The gun was loaded, he added, and as he took it in his own hand it was discharged in some manner. Mrs. Chapdelaine dropped to the floor, blood oozing through her skirts from a deep flesh wound in the thigh.

Hospital officials do not consider Mrs. Chapdelaine's condition serious and she will be released in a few days, they say.

His new friends were most accommodating. They were driving to New York and Felix saved railroad fare by riding with them. Then, on Monday, they went to his hotel room where Felix gave them the $25,000 so they could show it to the betting steward and collect his $50,000. They gave him a receipt and said they would bring him his $50,000 that afternoon.

With Felix's $25,000 they walked out of the hotel.

And after the afternoon had come, and gone, Felix walked out also. He walked to police headquarters and told his tale.

AMERICAN TARS WIN GLORY BY RESCUE

Gallant Act of West Elbara Praised by Three Nations as Epic of Sea

Acclaimed as heroes of the sea by French and Dutch government officials and the populace of Rotterdam, after their thrilling rescue of 36 officers and men of a French schooner destroyed by fire and sunk in mid-Atlantic, Captain Alexander L. Livingstone of Medford and the crew of the freighter West Elbara will be honored when their vessel docks at the Army Base tomorrow.

Executive officers of the Black Diamond line will board the West Elbara on her arrival to congratulate Captain Livingstone and his men and to decorate them with mementoes of their heroism.

The story of the rescue is another epic of the sea—another gallant achievement of American sailormen.

It was on the night of April 19 that the West Elbara, Rotterdam-bound, from Boston, sighted distress signals flying from the peak of the doomed French vessel. Captain Livingstone, from the bridge, slowed down the freighter's engines and directed a course toward the stricken schooner.

SEAS IMPERIL LIVES.

Heavy seas were running and the decks of both craft were constantly awash. Approaching as close as safety permitted the men of the West Elbara attempted to cast lines across the schooner's bows.

It was impossible to launch boats because of the surf.

Several officers and men of the West Elbara narrowly escaped death as they gamely tried to lower the boats in the boiling seas. Eventually all attempts to launch the boats had to be abandoned.

Captain Livingstone took the wheel himself and remained in the pilot house constantly, maneuvering his craft closer and closer to the sinking Frenchman. Finally, after nine hours of desperate work, lines were attached to the schooner and the West Elbara's boats were then able to reach her side.

The crew of the schooner set fire to the sinking craft before they leaped into rescuing boats. In addition to the seamen a big Newfoundland dog, mascot of the schooner, was saved.

HEROES ARE WELCOMED.

News of the rescue was later wirelessed to shore and a great throng was on the dock at Rotterdam when the West Elbara reached that city two days after the miniature drama was staged. A great welcome was given rescuers and rescued.

Captain Livinstone's home is at No. 22 Fairmount street, Medford Hillside. He is forty years old, married and has two sons. He comes of a long line of seafaring men who sailed their ships out of Canadian ports to far places all over the globe.

During the World War Captain Livingstone served in the United States Navy as lieutenant-commander. For a time he was in command of ammunition transports plying across the English Channel. After he assumed other important and dangerous posts.

Rev. Neils A. Hansen, assistant pastor of the Norwegian Seamen's Mission of East Boston, whose automobile ran down two boys on May 4, killing one instantly, was held in $2,000 for the Grand Jury today by Judge Barnes in East Boston court.

Hansen is held on charges of manslaughter and operating an automobile so as to endanger the lives and safety of the public.

Four-year-old Francis Perry of White street was killed and William Flynn, nine, also of White street, was injured when Hansen's car struck them at play on the sidewalk at Brooks and Trenton streets. Hansen said he drove over the curb to avoid collision with another automobile.

THREE HURT IN REVERE CRASH

Three persons are at the Chelsea Memorial Hospital in a critical condition as a result of a head-on collision on the Revere Beach parkway, near Broadway.

A machine driven by John Agathos, 21, of No. 715 Main street, Cambridge, who was accompanied by Miss Anna Flaherty, 21, of No. 135 George street, Roxbury, and a car driven by William Withers, 34, of No. 9 Dean street, Everett, collided.

Patrolman French of the Metropolitan police and the police of Revere rushed three ambulances to the scene and took the injured trio to the hospital.

So far the police have been unable to get an accurate account of how the crash occurred. All parties involved were too seriously injured to answer questions.

Both cars were rolling along at a good clip, it was believed by the police after examining the machines. The forward parts of the cars were driven back into the tonneau and tops and windshields shattered.

Witnesses to the accident sent in so many emergency calls that for a time the police believed a large number of persons had been injured.

CONNECTICUT WOMAN SEEKS PARIS DIVORCE

Paris, May 20 (I.N.S.).—A petition for divorce has been filed by Mrs. Pierre Furlong (Lillian E. Graves), married November 5, 1921, at Hartford, Ct. Mrs. Furlong charged desertion.

PAULINE LORD 'PURSUED'

New York, May 20 (I.N.S.).—Pauline Lord, actress and erstwhile star of "Anna Christie," was today completely vindicated in a $50,000 alienation of affections action taken against her by the wife of Mitchell Harris, actor.

The Harrises were married in 1910. Mrs. Harris, in her complaint, said that Miss Lord was introduced to the scene in 1918.

Referee John J. O'Connell ruled that the man or woman who alienates the affections of another must be the "pursuer" and not the "pursued." The referee held that Harris had been the pursuer, despite the introduction into the records of several love letters alleged to have been written by Miss Lord.

MADEIROS IS CALLED SANE

Testimony was completed today in the murder trial of Celestine Madieros in Dedham Superior Criminal Court. Madieros is charged with killing James E. Carpenter, cashier of the Wrentham National Bank.

The Government placed two alienists on the stand in rebuttal, who swore that Madieros was sane. Dr. Albert C. Thomas, superintendent of the Foxboro Hospital, testified that he examined the defendant twice. On the first examination he classed him as 82 per cent, normal, and on the second he gave him a rating of 81 per cent. Madieros was sane at the time of the killing, Dr. Thomas said.

Dr. Elisha A. Calhoon, superintendent of Medford State Hospital for the Insane, corroborated Dr. Thomas' testimony.

GOVERNOR SEES NEED OF SAFETY MEASURES

Declares Autoists Are Generally to Blame for Accidents Along Roads

A plea for the rights of pedestrians was made today by Governor Alvan T. Fuller, who, speaking before the fifth annual State conference of Massachusetts Safety Councils at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, placed the blame for most accidents squarely on the drivers of automobiles.

The Governor also forecast the barring of private automobiles from streets in downtown Boston in the not far distant future.

"Let your responsibility in connection with the safety of children and pedestrians be actuated by impulses of the heart and not by the law on one hand or the rights of the individual on the other," he said.

"The mere fact that a man or woman stands on the curb fifty feet in front of the automobile is no assurance to us, as drivers, that the road will remain clear. I observe people every day, sometimes I think they are the majority of motorists, riding along the road as if the person who owned or operated an automobile were a superior individual and that pedestrians were cattle.

"I observe motorists driving down the road taking it for granted that no one is going to run out in front of them. I see them pass the end of an electric car coming in the opposite direction taking it for granted that no one is coming around the end. I see them shoot past ice wagons disregarding the possibility that little boys may be running out from in back of it after searching for ice.

"It is going to take a lot of fun out of motoring to accept such responsibilities as I suggest, you may say. But what is of far greater importance, it will take some of the bloodshed out of it, too. One has but to stand on a street corner waiting to cross to realize the unrestrained over-lordship assumed by the average driver."

Automobile clubs, railroads, railways and Chambers of Commerce are co-operating in the study of ways of preventing accidents. Among the leaders in the conference are President Howard Coonley and Manager Lewis MacBrayne of the Massachusetts Safety Council.

FILL CHURCH AT KENNY RITES

Scores of Boston's prominent men in public life were among the throng that filled St. Augustine's Church, Dorchester street, South Boston, today, as a solemn high mass of requiem was sung at funeral services for Thomas J. Kenny, attorney, former City Councillor, former member of the Boston School Committee and once candidate for Mayor.

The church services were delayed forty-five minutes after the arrival of the funeral cortege from the Kenny residence in West Fifth street by trouble with the lighting system.

While the mass was in progress the session of South Boston district court was halted and a eulogy pronounced by Daniel J. Sullivan. Thirty-eight attorneys, present and former public officials and business men were honorary pallbearers, and the funeral procession was led by the Fourth Degree members, Knights of Columbus. Burial was at Calvary.

The mass was sung by Rev. Joseph F. Coppinger, permanent rector of St. Aubustine's, assisted by Rev. William J. Kenney as deacon, Rev. Richard A. Burke, deacon, and Rev. Thomas F. Garrity, master of ceremonies. Also in the sanctuary were Rev. J. Walter Lambert and Rev. Joseph F. Burke of the Gate of Heaven Church.

At the offertory Miss Elizabeth Clahane sang Leybach's Pie Jesu, and at the end Joseph Ecker sang Haydn's Jesu Deus Pacis. The other members of the quartette were Mrs. Julia Herrick and Miss Ellen McCarthy. Edward C. Babson was organist.

Superintendent of Schools Jeremiah E. Burke of Boston, Superintendent of Schools Michael E. Fitzgerald of Cambridge, former School Committeeman Charles S. O'Connor, ex-Congressman William S. McNary, John B. Drum, James T. O'Brien and Philip McMorrow were active pall-bearers.

The honorary bearers included George H. Johnson, representing Mayor Nichols; former Mayors Curley and Fitzgerald, Sheriff Keliher, General Logan, City Clerk James Donovan, City Messenger Edward J. Leary, Francis A. Campbell, clerk of the Superior Court; Daniel V. McIsaac, Acting Fire Commissioner Thomas F. Sullivan, ex-Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, Superintendent of Police Crowley, Police Commissioner Wilson, Thomas D. Lavelle and others.

NO ROCKS SEEN AT POLE, SAYS ELLSWORTH

By H. L. PHILLIPS.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Nome, Alaska, May 20.—According to members of the Norge expedition, there is no truth to statements published in the United States that rocks were seen near the North Pole.

"That statement is ridiculous," Lincoln Ellsworth, one of the backers of the transpolar flight, declared.

"Some water and a lot of old blue ice was all that was seen," according to Lieutenant Oskar Omdahl, one of Captain Roald Amundsen's trusted lieutenants.

Ellsworth Leaves for Old Mining Camp

Nome, Alaska, May 20 (A.P.).—A combined railroad and dog team will leave here today with Lincoln Ellsworth of New York for a gold mining camp, 45 miles north of here.

The mode of travel, known as "dogmobile," is a hand car on an abandoned narrow gauge railroad pulled by twenty Siberian dogs driven by Leonard Seppala, winner of the all Alaska sweepstakes and hero of a race with death to bring antitoxin to diphtheria stricken Nome residents.

Ellsworth is to visit a camp of the Hammond consolidated gold field, in the mountains back of Nome. He said he wants to eat some "sourdough" hot cakes like those he enjoyed in 1913 while mining near here.

PAINTER DIES AFTER FALL FROM LADDER

Falling from the top of an 18-foot ladder while painting in the esplanade of the South Station, Gregory McGrath, 25, of No. 12 Springer street, South Boston, suffered a fractured skull, from which he died an hour later at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

MELLON CALLS FRENCH DEBT PLAN FAIR

Washington, May 20 (A.P.).—The French debt settlement was described today by Secretary Mellon to the House Ways and Means committee as "fair both to the American taxpayer and to the French people."

It represents France's capacity to pay, Mr. Mellon said, and he predicted that when France has concluded debt settlements with England as well as this country it will be able to stabilise its currency.

The appearance of the secretary marked the first step in the legislative consideration of the French Jugo Slavian debt pacts, which the administration hopes to have approved by Congress at this session.

TERMS OF SETTLEMENT.

Mr. Mellon pointed out that the settlement provides for total payments by France of $6,847,674,102 over a period of 62 years on its original loan from this country of $3,340,000,000 with payments starting at $30,000,000 and graduating up to $125,000,000 annually, which will be paid for the last 45 years.

"To insist on too heavy payments in the early years," the secretary declared, "might well jeopardize accomplishment of those reforms essential to France's economic and financial rehabilitation.

"France at present is not able to set apart large sums to be transferred abroad as payments on account of her external debts. Despite great efforts, she has not yet fully repaired the losses in man power and property caused by the war. Her domestic debt has reached enormous proportions. Subject tothe ill-effects of a fluctuating currency, she has been making every effort to balance her budget."

DOLLAR FOR DOLLAR.

The present value of the French payments on 4¼ per cent. basis is $2,008,122,624 or about 50 per cent. of the debt funded, Mr. Mellon said, as compared with the Italian settlement of 26 per cent. while the money loaned France was obtained by the treasury at 4¼ per cent. This government is now getting money at almost 3 per cent, he declared and on this basis, the French settlement virtually represents dollar for dollar in present value.

Comparing the present value of the settlements with the sum of the total budget, the total foreign trade and the total national income for a year of each of these countries, he said the burden of the Fench settlement represents 15 per cent., the British 11.7 per cent., the Belgian 7 per cent., and the Italian 8.58 per cent.

Mr. Mellon explained terms of the Jugo Slavian debt settlement of $62,850,000, which he said also was based on the capacity of that country to pay. The settlement provides for total payments over the sixty-two year period of $95,177,635.

FR. W. J. DOWER IS DEAD

Rev. William J. Dower, native of Cambridge and one of the veteran Catholic priests of the Springfield diocese, who for 23 years has been pastor of St. Charles Church, Pittsfield, died today in New York city while returning from Atlantic City to Pittsfield. He was 68 years of age. Death resulted from a general breakdown, following pneumonia.

Father Dower received his early schooling in Cambridge, was graduated from Holy Cross in 1878, later pursuing his theological studies at the Grand Seminary, Montreal, and St. Mary's, Baltimore. He was ordained in 1882.

He served nine years in Holyoke, twelve years in Lenox, receiving his Pittsfield assignment in 1903.

2-YEAR TERM FOR MACRI

New Haven, May 20.—Joseph Macri, brother of Olympia Macri, acquitted of murder last year, was sentenced today to two years in the State Reformatory on a charge of robbery and violence. He had been on trial for two weeks with three others in Superior Court.

The charges grew out of the slaying of Henry B. Johnson of Portland, Me.

Olympia Macri was tried twice for the murder of John Bagnano. The jury disagreed in the first trial. The second jury found her not guilty.

BAPTISTS MUST STEM TIDE OF MODERNISM

Washington, May 20.—"Stem the tide of modernism" was the appeal of Dr. T. T. Shields of Toronto, Canada, president of the Baptist Bible Union of North America, at the opening of its six-day convention here last night. Dr. Shields urged strict adherence to "the historic Baptist position" of fundamentalism. He declared recent action by the Southern Baptist convention in passing a strong anti-evolution resolution was a "great victory" and added if the Northern convention fails to take a similar stand "it would open the doors to that which would be destructive of the things for which Baptists distinctively stand." Dr. George Ragland of Lexington, Ky., biterly attacked the "arrogance of science."

Colebrook, May 20.—Albert Lucier, 25, who escaped from the prison camp at Rutland, was captured at Parker's Crossing, Colebrook, on the Barre-Colebrook road.

The man was not regarded as dangerous, but was said to be mentally affected, and a large number of State policemen were sent to hunt him upon his escape.

LYNN HERO IN SIXTH RESCUE

Diving into Flax Pond, Lynn, and bringing to safety three-year-old Barbara Saunders, who had fallen into the pond in an effort to retrieve her doll, George Bancroft, 23, of No. 91 Lakeview street, Lynn, now has six rescues from drowning to his credit over a period of 15 years.

Barbara, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Saunders, No. 217 Euclid avenue, Lynn, was playing on the shore of the pond with her brother, Bernard, 5. Her doll slipped from her arms into the water. She reached over to get it and toppled in.

Bernard, frightened, ran to the garage of Edward Reynolds in Lakeview avenue, Lynn, and blurted out his story to Reynolds and Bancroft. The two men raced for the pond. Bancroft, in a running dive, cleared shallow water and made for a point 20 feet out where the child was sinking. He brought the unconscious body to shore and after 20 minutes work the two men revived her. She was then taken home.

Bancroft, last March, saved a boy and girl, after they had broken through the ice. Three other persons previously owed their lives to him.

SOUP KITCHENS FEED CHILDREN

London, May 20 (A.P.).—The national conference of miners' delegates today rejected the government's proposals for settlement of the miners' strike.

Cardiff, Wales, May 20 (A.P.).—While negotiations are going forward in Downing street, London, for a settlement of the lockout and strike in the coal mines, thousands of children of miners are being fed in soup kitchens in the little towns dotting the South Wales coal fields.

The number of kitchens is increased daily. School houses and chapels serve one or two meals daily under the supervision of the educations committees. The county councils pay the bills under the necessitous school children act.

The Rhondda Valley is a centre of distress. Soup kitchens there were opened ten days ago. Without them the children would go hungry. The miners' strike pay is only 18 shillings weekly, plus two shillings for each child. Miners' families usually are large, often ten children. The average family pays from 7 to 10 shillings as weekly rental.

Since the establishment of soup kitchens, the schoolmasters say the children have been better fed than br months.

No talk is heard among the miners of surrender to the government's proposal for a lower wage. here seems every indication that ey are ready to face worse times, necessary.

Sir Austen Chamberlain told the House of Commons yesterday that the British Foreign Office was considering whether to make representations to Soviet Russia in connection with statements reported to have been made by Soviet officials in support of the British general strkie.

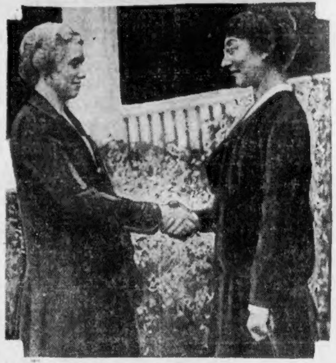
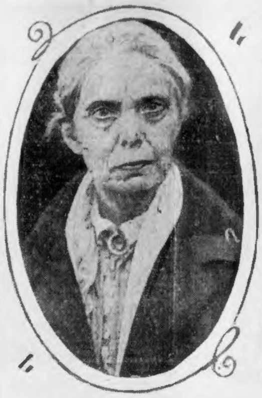
WOMEN VOTERS PROTEST CHILD LABOR IN N. E. TOBACCO FIELDS



CONGRATULATED

Mrs. Robert L. De Normandie, newly elected president of the Women Voters (right), being congratulated by Mrs. Arthur G. Rotch, retiring president.



HONORARY PRESIDENT

OFFICERS OF LEAGUE

Mrs. Joseph McCord, secretary of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters (left); Mrs. James Cheeseman, New England director (center), and Mrs. Arthur G. Rotch.

SEEK TO GUARD YOUNG WORKER

Nearly 6,000 boys and girls, the majority ranging in age from twelve to fourteen years, are laboring daily in the tobacco fields of Massachusetts.

These startling figures compiled by the Child Labor committee, were cited by Mrs. Roland Baker, wife of Boston's postmaster, at the annual convention of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

"It is shocking to learn that in spite of our existing laws these children, thousands of whom should be in school or at home, are wage earners in tobacco fields.

"Daily they are rounded up in the cities and taken in motor trucks to the fields. The boys are put to work in the fields, the girls sent to factories where they sew the tobacco leaves.

"The boys, all of whom are under sixteen and the big majority from twelve to fourteen years of age, are forced to sit upon the ground and hitch along from plant to plant gathering the leaves."

Mrs. Herbert Knox Smith, secretary of the National League of Women Voters, addressing the delegates at the convention said:

"The League has anticipated President Coolidge's advice by several years. He says that violence and crime are not the greatest dangers that the country has to face. We know that a far more serious danger lurks in the shirking of responsibilities of citizenship."

Mrs. Robert L. DeNormandie was elected president of the League for the coming year at the close of the two-day session, succeeding Mrs. Arthur G. Rotch. Dr. Mary T. Maynard is treasurer, and Mrs. Joseph Alexander McCord, secretary.

CHILDREN ORDERED TO SUPPORT MOTHER

After hearing charges against three sons and a daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth A. Connelly of Quincy for non-support of their 80-year-old mother, Judge McAnarney of the Quincy District Court yesterday ordered each of the children to pay $2 per week for her support.

BURNSIDE'S WHISKERS COMBED OUT IN COURT

New York, May 20 (A.P.).—The whiskers of the late General Ambrose E. Burnside, Civil War hero, credited with creating the particular style of hirsute adornment which bears his name, has gotten into a court tangle.

Miss Ells C. Patterson of Milwaukee is suing Colgate & Co. for $150,000 for using her uncle's famous features as "a sort of springboard from which to jocosely and humorously launch a sales argument in its advertisements."

Miss Patterson complains the company advanced its sale of shaving soap at the expense of her distinguishd relative's war record and tonsorial peculiarities. She cites an advertisement that says "when Burnsides were in bloom."

Miss Patterson says as a result of the "malicious and unauthorized" use of the General's picture many persons in her home town have said she sold permission to the defendant company to use the picture.

Miss Patterson seeks a jury trial. The defendants will attempt to have the case set aside as not actionable.

United States government, cannot bring pressure to bear on hundreds of millions of European bonds sold in the United States. Interest payments will be stopped and the value of the bond will gradually dwindle away. TAKE WARNING. Some of the bonds are probably good, but where European nations borrow at usurious rates, interest and principal will not be paid in full.

THE TRAIN on which this is written is passing just now through Kansas wheat fields so big that from the car window you cannot see to the end of them. You can understand how farmers, scattered over these wide plains, feel as they read the "grain market report," believing that men who never saw a wheat field or ran a harvesting machine fix the price of wheat, and usually put it up after the farmer has sold his wheat.

THE WHITE HOUSE denies, unnecessarily, a foolish yarn about spiritualistic seances held there in the Coolidge administration. You couldn't have any first-class table rapping in that atmosphere. One look at Calvin Coolidge's cold blue eye, and "Little Minnehaha," spirit of the lovely Indian girl, would say, "Let me get back to spirit land, where it is warm."

TOMORROW, at Reno, Nev., two murderers, Sanko Jukich and John H. Randolph, will be suffocated in the "lethal gas chamber." One killed a young woman, the other killed his mother. The men, locked in an airtight room, will hear a slight hissing like that of a snake, and soon die. Representatives of the State and relatives of the condemned men, if they choose, may watch the performance through a peep hole. That latest fashion in killing may frighten murderers more than the rope or electric chair—but it will not prevent murder. The State must set the example and stop the killing first.

YOU WILL KNOW about the Senatorial election in Pennsylvania when you read this. Mr. Pepper, in the primaries, represents President Coolidge and the administration. Congressman Vare, powerful Pennsylvania boss, runs as the representative of good old King Alcohol. Gifford Pinchot, Governor of the State, runs on an ice water platform, supporting prohibition because it is the law and because he believes in it.

THAT ELECTION will have important results now, and in 1928 when Mr. Coolidge is to be nominated for his second elective term. If the great State of Pennsylvania should go "wet" various opinions would be hastily revised.

DEMOCRATIC POLITICS considers the steady rise of Governor Smith of New York as a candidate for the next Presidential nomination. He and his associates all over the country are working to abolish the two-thirds rule and the unit rule. Governor Smith would have some votes in many delegations that would be two-thirds against him. Abolishing the two-thirds rule would give him the nomination if he succeeds in getting a bare majority. Governor Smith has earnest workers, hundreds of thousands of them, thoroughly understanding politics, working for him day and night. His nomination is by no means improbable.

HAD THE TWO-THIRDS rule been abolished earlier, Champ Clark would have been nominated instead of Woodrow Wilson. That would have made a considerable difference in the world's history. Champ Clark would not have gone to Europe.

600 KILLED IN BOMBARDMENT OF DAMASCUS

London, May 20 (A.P.)—More than 800 civilians, including women and children, and about 100 rebels and twenty French have been killed and 300 houses destroyed in a bombardment by the French forces of the Midan quarter of the city of Damascus, says a dispatch to the Daily Express.

The latest bombardment is said to have been that announced May 11 as a comparatively small affair, involving the deaths of about fifty Druse rebels.

The trouble began May 6 when the Druse rebels attacked French military posts, killing or capturing twenty-eight soldiers at Bob-Mousalla, and took refuge in the Midan or southern section of Damascus.

The tribesmen, said to have numbered about 200, barricaded themselves in houses, and 3,000 French troops surrounded the quarter, demanding the Druses be handed over on pain of bombardment.

The inhabitants said they had no arms and could not comply, but the French were invited to come in and capture the rebels. The French commander realizing this would mean serious sacrifices to his soldiers allowed the inhabitants an hour to reach zones of safety from bombardment.

The shelling of Midan constitutes the most serious incident in French Syria since the French General Sarrail's terrible bombardment of the ancient city last October, when several thousands [illegible] killed in forty-eight hours of shelling.

OPPOSITION TO TWO-THIRDS RULE GROWS

Sentiment in favor of abolishing the two-thirds rule in Democratic conventions was still growing today among Massachusetts partymen. Three more prominent Democrats placed themselves on record as favoring majority rule as a means of saving the party from a repetition of the fatal deadlock that split the last national convention.

Here is what they say:

GEORGE E. CURRAN, Democratic member of the Governor's Council and delegate to the last national convention—I strongly favor the abolition of the two-thirds rule for nominating candidates in the national convention. This un-Democratic rule should have been cast into the discard years ago. It has created nothing but discord in the party and has allowed an organized minority to defeat the nomination of the popular choice.

JAMES DONOVAN, City Clerk and former chairman of the Democratic Committee—I am opposed to the two-thirds rule. I think it destroyed the Democratic party at the last national convention. It is the second time in the history of the party that the two-thirds rule has done this. In the year 1860, Stephen A. Douglas would have been nominated for President had the majority ruled. The terrific deadlock in the last Democratic convention is what caused the terrible disaster to the party. The majority rule should prevail as it has in various state conventions throughout the country.

ROLAND D. SAWYER, Representative from Ware and a delegate to the last Democratic convention.—I certainly favor the abolition of the two-thirds rule and the unit rule in the national Democratic convention. If there ever were sufficient reasons for their existence those reasons have now disappeared.

The existence of both rules are sources of "boss" control and hence an invitation to manipulate and defeat the will of the rank and file of the voters. The tedious and long-drawn out last convention would never have been possible but for the two-thirds and [illegible] unit rules.

$32,000,000 VOTED FOR ARGENTINA WARSHIPS

ONE OF AMERICA'S GREATEST CHAINS OF FURNITURE STORES

Experiments have shown that a boy of eight has a "fuel" or energy requirement of approximately 1700 calories a day — about two-thirds of that required by a man of forty, engaged in office work or other sedentary occupation.

They know the needs of growing bodies

WHAT a study the modern nutrition expert makes of the needs of growing children!

Analyzing the amount of energy they spend in play. Analyzing the amount of nourishment that goes for growth. Determining what foods and what combinations of foods are best to make them active and sturdy!

Mothers, therefore, will be particularly interested in the fact that among the experts who have helped in perfecting White Rose Bread are nutrition authorities of two universities—as well as three of the leading authorities on home cooking in the country.

They will be interested to know that every ingredient used in this bread has the approval of these experts. That these ingredients are not only the finest—but that each is tested in a special Testing Kitchen before it goes to make a single loaf of White Rose Bread for your table.

No wonder women everywhere are finding this loaf especially delicious—for it has been made, first of all, especially wholesome!

Try White Rose Bread today

Order a loaf of White Rose Bread today and notice the difference yourself. Notice its texture —firm and even, like the moist fresh loaves you remember in your childhood. See how much its full, rich flavor adds to each meal!

Notice, too, its "keeping quality"— which women have wanted especially in bread. Keeping quality not just for a day, but for several days.

You will realize why particular housewives and careful mothers everywhere are serving this appetizing loaf.

Your own grocer has White Rose Bread. It comes to you in a dainty wrapper of blue and white checks like a fresh tea towel.

It is baked not once but twice each day so that you may get it fresh—just a few hours away from the oven—whenever you buy. Massachusetts Baking Company.

HEART TROUBLE IS FREQUENT NEAR WATER

Atlantic City, N. J., May 20 (A.P.) —Children who live near the water are more subject to heart trouble than those who live away from it, and Northerners are more likely to have rheumatic hearts than Southerners, according to speakers before the American Heart Association.

"Growing pains in children frequently mean rheumatic fever, with resultant heart disease," said Dr. Hyman Green of Boston. "Such children should not be neglected." Children who have sore throats are liable to have rheumatic fever and should be watched, he declared. Children with heart diseases should not go in swimming, play in the snow or get their feet wet.

"If treated well, they are able to grow up to be happy and useful men and women," he said. Some may even become athletes.

Heart disease as a public problem decreases as one travels from the North southward, said Dr. William Robey, also of Boston. The reason for this is the increasing prevalence of rheumatic fever in colder climates.

GIRL CURED AT ST. THERESA SHRINE

The faith of Margaret Morgan, 12, of No. 13 Wait street, Roxbury, who has been praying to St. Teresa, the "Little Flower," has been rewarded, for what her mother considered a miraculous cure, has been effected.

April 7 last her mother, Mrs. Thomas H. Morgan, took her to St. Stephen's Church in the North End for prayer to the "Little Flower" at special services conducted by the Rev. Charles J. Ring. Since then her attendance in veneration of St. Teresa has been constant.

Recently Mrs. Morgan went to Father Ring and told him of the miracle that had been effected in the cure of her daughter. Mrs. Morgan said it used to take her an hour each night to prepare Margaret for bed, so severe was the skin affection.

Shortly after her visits to the church began, an improvement was noticed. Now Margaret has just one slight scar on her knee. Mrs. Morgan attributes the cure to the intercession of St. Teresa.

Margaret is the second young person who has carried her afflictions to the "Little Flower," and her prayer been answered. Miss Mary Manning of Wellesley Hills, who had lost her voice, suddenly regained it while making a novena to the "Little Flower."

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

'Venetian Mirror' To Be Presented by Copley Players Tomorrow

TEA BETWEEN THE ACTS AND AN INformal reception at the final curtain are interesting details of tomorrow's presentation by the Copley Players of Mrs. Mary Lawton's play, "A Venetian Mirror."

BEAUTIFULLY COSTUMED by the Grace Ripley studios, interpreted by the Copley Players, with scenery designed by Daniel Brewster and an accompaniment by the Delbeck musicians, "A Venetian Mirror" promises to delight its audience.

PROPERTIES HAVE been brought from Venice to grace the scenes which, by the way, are laid in a colorful oleander-lined passage beside the Church of Santa Maria Della Salute. Boston's own bit of Italy, the North End, has also been combed for effects to enhance the whole.

MRS. RONALD T. LYMAN as its head, and a group including Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Mrs. Walter Hines Page, Mrs. Arthur Perrin, Mrs. Henry Grant Learnard, Miss Eleanora Snelling, associated with a large and imposing patroness list, makes for a financial success.

NATURALLY, IN THESE DAYS of fine philanthropic endeavor, the matinee has as raison d'etre a most worthy effort—the work for disabled soldiers in hospitals carried on by the Hospital Department of Community Service.

FOR YEARS, practically ever since the World War, Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Brien has mothered this pet charity of hers, and with a devoted band of helpers has brought cheer and happiness to many a bedridden hero.

A GEM OF THE Boston Art Club's Summer show is "Venus," by Albert Felix Schmitt, Cambridge artist of international attainments. Bostonians who follow the art exhibits are specially interested in the "Venus."

COUNT CHABRIER has said, of Mr. Schmitt's work, in the Revue du Vrai et du Beau, that he has found a new and iridescent form of interpretation. That his talent, in its multiple aspects, has acquired much notoriety, both in Europe and in America.

THE LEGION of Joseph Pennell admirers is wearing a path to the Vose Galleries where Pennell etchings and watercolors are having a phenomenally successful showing and sale.

ALSO AT THE VOSE Galleries, and commanding much attention, is an exhibition of modern masters—among them Jonas Lie, Henry W. Ranger, H. Dudley Murphy, Abbott Graves and Nicolai Fechin.

MR. AND MRS. SIDNEY WILMOT WINSLOW, JR., of Fernwood, Brookline, have sent out cards for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Alice Warrene Winslow, and Caspar Ranger, 2d, at 4 in the afternoon of Tuesday, June 1.

A VERY BEAUTIFUL setting has this June marriage. "Fernwood," out in Clyde street, Brookline, is a handsome English castle set in wide acres, its handsome apartments and broad terraces making a perfect ceremonial background.

THE BRIDE-ELECT with her delicate beauty should make a lovely and winsome bride. Her debut, two or three seasons ago, was a large affair at "Fernwood," when friends came to tea and stayed on through an evening of informal celebration.

GREAT FINANCIAL success attended the recent afternoon of whist sponsored by Mrs. Philip Andrews, wife of Admiral Andrews of the First Naval District, and other matrons of the Navy Set. Benefitting the Navy Relief Society, it carried a special appeal.

MRS. E. S. R. BRANDT, wife of Lieutenant - Commander Brandt, one of the aids to Admiral Andrews, sang with her usual pleasing success, and there were other features to make the afternoon outstanding. That such a goodly sum was realized was vastly pleasing to Mrs. Andrews, the chatelaine of Commandant's house.

A difficult and varied program, including Debussy, Liszt, Mozart and Chopin, has been arranged for the Steinert Hall recital.

50 ORCHESTRAS AND BANDS

Fourteen Boston and New England women who have forged to the front as directors and leaders of excellent musical organizations bring their bands and orchestras to compete with man-made music at the band and orchestra competition on Boston Common, Saturday morning.

Prominent women leaders and directors who have entered bands and orchestras include Miss Georgianna E. Taylor, Dover, Mass., who enters four orchestras; Maud M. CAMPS STEP IN PROGRESS OF 'NEW WOMAN'

Indorsing training camps for girls as a step in the progress for the "new woman," Henry A. Higgins, secretary of the Massachusetts Prison Association, widely-known criminologist and sociologist, believes that the movement will meet with widespread approval.

Mr. Higgins was a worker in the field of physical education for women and girls for a period of fifteen years, and was closely associated with the late Dr. Sargent of Harvard and Sargent School. Mr. Higgins says:

"The girl camp idea will easily be a big success. It is another one of those movements which illustrates the desire of women and girls to reach out to their fullest freedom, and it is a healthy movement. The camp idea for boys has long been proved to be wonderfully beneficial and it is easy to understand that all the advantages that boys have received from training in out-door life are there to be enjoyed by girls.

WELCOMED RELIEF.

In fact it is a highly necessary release from the binding limitations of city life which in modern times are restricting the wholesome activities of city-bred children.

In recent years the drift has been all toward the cities where most people are housed under conditions of congestion. As a relief from the strain of urban life on the young, nothing could be more helpful than the camp for girls.

"Dr. Dudley A. Sargent, for years director of the Harvard athletics and physical training and the founder of the Sargent School of Physical Training, did more than any other man in America to pave this new road to freedom for women in the athletics and sports field.

PRAISES SARGENT.

His women teachers who were sent out all over the country every year, were taught to encourage girls to discard all superfluous clothing. The corset and the long skirt were killed off first and finally women and girls adopted practically all the sport clothing and the athletic garments which they had so long envied on the men.

"Dr. Sargent, was also the originator of the Summer camp for girls. Several years ago he opened one for his girl pupils and it instantly became a wonderful success. Thus it will be seen that back of the idea of camps for girls is the wisdom and the philosophy of America's greatest physical educator. It was always his hope that the idea would one day become popular."

WILD EDITORS ARE TAMED BY 'TEXAS JACK'

Border Gun-Fanner Drops Into City Room and Shows Why Indians Are Scarce

Fresh from the West, "Texas Jack" Sullivan strode into the city room of the Boston Evening American and banged away with his Colt single action .44.

The rewrite battery stood firm in the face of the withering fire, most of them having been continuously under fire for hours at a time. One of the copy boys sought refuge in a waste-basket and a sob sister wilted into a graceful swoon.

As a smoke cloud drifted over his head one of the copy readers stuck his head cautiously above the desk and asked:

"What's all the shooting for?"

SPEEDY ON THE DRAW.

"Texas Jack," it developed, had just dropped in to demonstrate three of the fancy shots used by Indian fighters in the old-time West. The shots, of course, were blanks. Jack claims to be the world's fastest gun slinger and was at one time instructor Tom Mix, Bill Hart, Fred Stone, Hoot Gibson and other movie celebrities.

He is in New England for a prolonged stay and intends to write a series of articles on "Gun Play, Past and Present." He is a graduate of Notre Dame, class of 1912, and an adventurer and athlete of some repute. He fought with Madero in Mexico in 1909 and in 1913 paddled a canoe from New York to Tampico, Mex., through inland waters.

Three years ago he paddled a canoe across Lake Erie, a distance of eighty miles in 23 hours and 55 minutes.

DAD OLD INDIAN FIGHTER.

His shots are dazzling bits of gun play. In the "broncho reverse shot" he extends the gun by the barrel, as if to surrender it, and, with a lightning movement, pulls the trigger. The "hammer-fanning hip shot" is executed by tying the pistol to the leg and the gun is fired by stroking or "fanning." The reverse belt band draw" is another of his trick shots.

Texas Jack is a son of Colorel John H. Sullivan, who did some shooting himself in the Indian frontier wars and the Spanish-American and Philippine conflicts.

RIFFS BROKE THROUGH THE SPANISH LINES

Madrid, May 20 (A.P.).—While the Spanish troops cut deeply into the Riffian front in the Alhucemas and Melilla sectors in the recent fighting, the tribesmen broke through the Spanish lines before Tetuan, the seat of Spanish general headquarters. This information is contained in an official statement issued by the war department. It adds that Spanish reinforcements have restored the situation by repulsing the invaders with heavy losses.

Gen. Sanjurjo gives the Riffian losses as 76 killed.

FASCIST RAIDERS CLUB ENEMY OF MUSSOLINI

Rome, May 20 (I.N.S.).—Deputy Conti, leader of the Italian Republican party, was clubbed and wounded in the head when a band of Fascisti raided the office of the newspaper, La Voce today. The raid was conducted for the purpose of attacking Conti, whose vigorous utterances recently have aroused displeasure of supporters of Premier Mussolini. The plant of La Voce, a Republican newspaper, suffered no damage.

DEATH AWAITS BUSY LITTLE BEE IN TREES

Sprays used in orchards about blossom time to kill harmful insects, government experts have found, are fatal to many of the busy bees, because of the injection of arsenic in their nectar.

The Agriculture Department recommmends spraying after most of the blossoms have fallen.

NO P'S AND Q'S

This is the provisional President of Poland. You spell his name with all the alphabet except p. q. z. x. This is it: Sejmmarschallrataj. He will serve until the National Assembly chooses a successor to President Wejcjechowski, exiled by Pilsudski.

POLAND WANTS PILSUDSKI AS PRESIDENT

Warsaw, May 20 (I.N.S.).—The Pilsudski government decided today to convoke a national assembly on May 28 or May 29.

Marshal Pilsudski has reiterated his aversion to establishing a dictatorship, explaining that a dictatorship is "a one man affair which disappears when the man dies."

The assembly's first duty will be to choose a President for the republic. After being sworn in the President will form a Cabinet.

The monarchist league has requested that Pilsudski make himself President of Poland. The league praises the performer of the coup d'etat lavishly, calling him one of the great leaders of history, but adds that he will "cease to rank with Bonaparte" if he refuses the presidency.

The league assures Pilsudski of its full support if he becomes President. Conditions in the country today were reported as quiet.

Two Polish Generals Accused of Atrocities

Berlin, May 20 (A.P.).—A dispatch from Warsaw says General Rozwadowski, commander-in-chief of the Polish army under the Witos government and General Zagprski, who dowski, commander of the air force, have been taken from the Wilarnow Castle, where they were detained, to the military prison in Warsaw. The dispatch adds that, according to the Warsaw newspapers, both officers will be court-martialed for alleged atrocities.

WOMAN BITTEN BY DOG WINS $5,000 VERDICT

Five thousand dollars was awarded to Mrs. Lillian A. Cruikshank of Braintree Highlands by a Suffolk Superior Court jury in her suit against the Brockton Agricultural Society for injuries suffered when a German police dog bit her on the lip at the Brockton Fair.

The dog was on exhibition in the show tent and Mrs. Cruikshank said the animal sprang at her inflicting a wound that left a scar half an inch long. She claimed permanent injury through nerve infection.

U. S.'S FIRST LOCOMOTIVE IS "COMING BACK"

Baltimore, May 20 (A.P.).—"All the way under his own power, over the trunk line," Tom Thumb, first locomotive built in America, will wheeze and pant its way from the Mount Claire shops of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to Philadelphia on May 30.

Railroad running time will do a blackflip to 1830, when Tom Thumb trundles away, dragging to what modern eyes appears a dog kennel on wheels—once dignified as a "passenger coach"—to creep humbly, albeit with ancient pride, into the shadow of bull-throated giants of the rails and luxurious parlor-buffet-observation cars at the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition.

Tom Thumb and his battered consort will not feel their way over the unaccustomed standard gauge rails alone, however. A marvel of a later date—Mogul 600—exhibited in Philadelphia fifty years ago as the world's "most modern," will grumble and rumble along behind.

Mogul 600 bears a family resemblance to the railway engine of the present day, but Tom Thumb is a glorified handcar.

40 MILLION FOR TURKISH ARMS

Constantinople, May 20 (A.P.).—The Turkish Parliament has voted an appropriation of $40,000,000 for the Army and Navy and for the purchase of munitions.

The newspapers applaud the country's military preparations, they say that force alone commands respect in international relations and insist that the Turkish army is now equal to any European army.

Hired Car Left as Security for $5 Loan

Belfast, Me., May 20.—After pleading guilty in Municipal court to the charge of larceny of an automobile, Robert B. Morrison, 18, of Chelsea, Mass., was held by Judge Carleton Doak for the Grand Jury under bonds of $1,000.

Morrison, who has been working in a local factory, hired a new 1926 car form Otis Smith Saturday for one hour. Failing to return, he was traced to Portland and arrested

Eel in Water Pipe Puts Gloucester in Darkness

Gloucester, May 20.—A three-foot eel, large around as a man's arm, got caught in the water meter on the line serving the boiler room of the Gloucester Electric Company, shutting off the supply and plunging the entire city into darkness. The fires in the boilers had to be pulled and pumps from the fire department drew water from the hydrants to refill the boilers.

ROXBURY SALE FOR ST. MARY SOCIETY

Held at Home of Mrs. Lincoln Today to Raise Money for Mission Work

By JAMES WALSH.

Members of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith attached to the parish of St. Mary of the Angels, Roxbury, today are holding an interesting Mission Sale at the home of Mrs. Lincoln, No. 18 Weld avenue, Roxbury. The affair will continue until 10 o'clock tonight and the proceeds will be devoted to the work of the society.

The fifth annual convention of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade, to be held at the University of Dayton, June 25-28, will be conducted after the manner of a school of leadership, according to the plans under consideration at the Crusade Castle at Cincinnati, the national headquarters.

The society is a federation of Catholic students for the purpose of making Catholic missions, at home and abroad, known to American Catholics. Its total membership numbers more than a half million.

Foremost among the educational features of the convention will be a number of round tables for mission study, each of which will be presided over by a nationally known mission expert. Other novel features will include an evening of mission drama and the exemplification of the Crusade's Ritual of Initiation, in the University of Dayton stadium. A large number of Catholic educators and diocesan mission supervisors is expected. A new program of mission education for the Catholic student body of this country will be outlined. The Rt. Rev. Mgr. Joseph F. McGlinchey, D. D., diocesan director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, will be one of the notable missionary experts to attend.

The Rev. Francis P. Duffy, D. D., of New York, is making a brief visit to Boston today and will be the guest of the John Boyle O'Reilly Reading Circle at their annual dinner at Hotel Vendome tonight. Father Duffy has a host of friends in this city.

The fifth annual banquet of the Beachmont Catholic Women's Club will be held Wednesday evening at the Governor Bradstreet School Hall, Revere. The Rev. Jones I. Corrigan, S. J., of Boston College, will be the principal speaker. Among the invited guests are the Rev. John V. Cronan, chaplain of the club; the Rev. William V. Chamberlain, the Rev. Thomas McDonough, Governor Fuller and Mayor and Mrs. John E. Walsh. A number of special features has been arranged in a fine entertainment program. Miss Agnes J. Mahoney, president of the club, heads the following committee of arrangements:

Mrs. Annie F. Welsh, Mrs. Elizabeth Donnelly, Mrs. Agnes McKenna, Mrs. Emily Smith, Mrs. Mary Reilley, Mrs. Margaret Ford, Mrs. Alice G. Casale, Mrs. Delia Yeomans, Mrs. Annie V. Keating, Mrs. Alice Mahoney, Mrs. Mary V. Tye, Mrs. Mary Flynn Kilday, Mrs. Annie LeClair, Mrs. Marion Cronin, Mrs. Rose Yeomens, Mrs. Mary Ronan, Mrs. Helen N. O'Connor, Mrs. Elizabeth B. Lee and Mrs. Julia T. Daesen.

ITALY ORGANIZES BIG PETROLEUM COMPANY

Rome, May 20 (A.P.)—Italy's hope of achieving independence for importation of petroleum, gasoline and oils took tangible form today with the creation of the semi-governmental "General Italian Petroleum Company." Capitalized at 100,000,000 lire, of which sixty millions is subscribed by the Ministry of Finance, twenty by the National Insurance Institute and the remainder by the National Social Insurance Company. Its purpose is to conduct research, purchase and develop wells and transport oil.

FEAR OF REDS GONE, SAYS EDITOR WHITE

Atlantic City, N. J., May 20 (I.N.S.)—The British general strike "has laid forever the fear of Bolshevism" and America need have no fear of it, William Allen White, Kansas editor, said today. The outcome of the strike, he said, showed that in Britain every man is getting so much out of life he feels he has some stake in the government and is to all intents and purposes a policeman, guardian of the established order who would strike, but would not plunder or wreck his civilization.

FILM WITHOUT MUSIC IS NEW SCHEME

Barrymore's 'Don Juan' to Be Presented Without Orchestra

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, May 18.—John Barrymore's Broadway presentation of "Don Juan" next month will be as free of a visible orchestral presentation as if an orchestra conductor and his smiling aides did not exist. And not only will Don Juan do his deviltment without the usual violin and trombones but "So This Is Paris" and "Ole Bull" will be offered up for the same kind of sacrificial experiment.

John Barrymore

At this very moment Harry Warner is hurrying Eastward with a new invention to take the place of the motion picture orchestra. This invention is a photographical attachment placed on the edge of the film synchronizing with the action of the story.

So sure is the eldest member of the firm of firm of Warners that he has a big idea that he plans to present all three of the pictures on Broadway at one time. In brief New York will see Barrymore, Sid Chaplin and Ernest Lubitsch's handiwork all in one week.

Sid Chaplin

And after New York gives its critical opinion Mr. Warner will take the boat for Europe where he will spend three months arranging for the production of Warner Brothers pictures on the other side of the big pond.

AGNES AYRES is content to let her return vehicle to the screen be a small br.. But wait—about five years ago Agnes played the part of the heroine in "The Sheik," Rudolph Valentino's picture. Manuel Reachi saw her and promptly fell in love with her and married her. No matter how many pictures Agnes made after "The Sheik," Manuel always spoke of the Valentino film as being the ideal picture. So when Rudy one day told Agnes he would like to show a comeback in "The Son of a Sheik," supposedly staged some years previously and in the lifetime of the first Sheik, Agnes agreed to appear in these scenes. Rudy and Manuel are inseparable.

Agnes Ayres

So Manuel, who is Agnes' business manager, instead of discouraging her, is delighted. It will be very interesting to see Agnes in this picture, for she is beginning to look like her old self—and even more beautiful sine the birth of her baby.

FLORENCE VIDOR has learned that patience is indeed a virtue. When she was cast for the lead in the "Great Gatsby" she felt that something was wrong somewhere with this picture. Here Famous-Players-Lasky had promised to star her and her first assignment after this promise was in a man's picture pure and simple, and Florence, as well as everyone else, realized it. But now comes word that it is to be made a starring vehicle for Richard Dix and Florence will not be called upon to play second fiddle. She will be given a more suitable woman's picture.

Florence Vidor

SPEAKING of Cecil De Mille. At the recent dinner given by the Producers Distributors he introduced Jetta Joudal as a "cocktail of emotions." Well, Victor Varconi, who has one of the important roles in "The Volga Boatman," which opened at Carthay's Circle Theatre last night will have a chance to learn all about the much discussed Goudal temperament, for he plays opposite her in this next De Mille "fillum."

Jetta Joudal.

ROMANCE—A warm thrill of truest love runs through the deepest, darkest mystery ever offered New England. Don't fail to begin "The Red Lamp," Mary Roberts Rinehart's best story, in next Monday's Boston Evening American.

Seeks Town Water for Schooner Tied to Dock

Onset, May 20.—The water department of this town has had the most peculiar request in its history. Captain William White of the two-masted schooner James L. Mollow of Boston, has petitioned that town water be piped into his ship which is tied up at Association Dock. His request will undoubtedly be granted. The 110-foot schooner will be used as a public tea room this Summer.

MORE KIDDIES MADE HAPPY

"The plan of the Boston Evening American and Metropolitan Theatre to give the children in the various institutions of Greater Boston entertainment in the form of motion pictures in the institutions is a splendid idea," said Miss May Paulson, acting matron of New England Home for Little Wanderers, Roxbury. Miss Paulson made this comment after witnessing the comedy feature film, "That's My Baby," with the many young children of the institution.

"The motion picture is one of the best forms of entertainment for children in institutions and they seldom see any. The kiddies seem to enjoy motion pictures better than any form of entertainment. Despite this fact they seldom have an opportunity of witnessing movies.

"During the Winter we generally give them one entertainment every month here. These entertainments generally take the form of a "Punch and Judy, show or magic. Occasionally some one loans us a motion picture machine and some reels, but not often.

"The children enjoyed, "That's My Baby" very much as their exclamations and laughter testified. The antics of the child in the picture were particularly pleasing to them."

The children at the New England Home for Little Wanderers followed the adventures of Douglas MacLean and the child who tried to adopt him as a daddy, with keen interest. The frequent exclamations 'Oh' and "Ah" clearly told the story of their enjoyment. When the little boy who is featured in the picture was spanked by MacLean they cried out, as one, "That's mean."

Toward the end of the picture, at the conclusion of each reel, frequent exclamations of 'This is swell," "Isn't this a dandy picture,' etc., were heard from the delighted boys and girls.

One of the children who viewed the film while seated in the lap of acting Matron Paulson was five-year-old Grace, a lovely little kiddie who is both deaf and dumb.

The hundreds of children who live at the House of the Angel Guardian, No. 11 Perkins street, Jamaica Plain, also witnessed the picture today and keenly enjoyed it.

St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum, No. 52 Camden street, South End, will be visited tomorrow afternoon, the Working Boys' Home, Newton Highlands, will see the picture Monday, and the kiddies at the Home for Destitute Catholic Children, No. 788 Harrison avenue, will view it on Tuesday. A week from tomorrow it will be shown at the Home for Jewish Children in Dorchester.

Wives Adrift

by MILDRED BARBOUR

A Timid Bride From the Country Falls Prey to a Social Hyena

You spy! You cheat! I hate you!" Phyllis cried violently, attacking Charlotte. Posed by Mary Ann Deutler (right) and Ruth Abbott. (Photo by Charles G. Snyder.)

Dave Manning, Boston engineer, who has piled up a fortune, meets and weds Charlotte Connolly, daughter of a college professor. He is verging on middle age, she is in her early twenties. They come to Boston to live. Dick and Phyllis Fenway are Dave's intimate friends in Boston social life. Phyllis is given Charlotte to introduce to Boston. Charlotte is unused to city ways. She meets Phil Van Alan, admirer of Phyllis. Leila, flapper daughter of David Manning, thinks Charlotte a mere kid.

Charlotte meets with an accident and also meets Lawrence Hill. He is very good-looking and sympathetic and presses his attentions on the young wife. She, lonesome, fascinated, and, to tell the truth, not a little proud of a conquest to exhibit Phyllis and the ladies of her set, finally makes him her "tame cat," as Phyllis calls Phil Van Alan.

Then one night, when Manning is presumed to be in Chicago, Hill forces himself into Charlotte's presence. Dave returns suddenly and finds Hill, who passes himself off as a physician, called by Charlotte. Manning appears to believe the story of Charlotte, but later sends a lawyer.

Charlotte settles a separation.

Hill, completely in control of Charlotte, orders that she allow it to be given out that she will marry him as soon as she can get a divorce.

Charlotte runs into Hill with a rather cheap woman friend. He orders Charlotte to give a dinner party for his scum friends.

Charlotte defies Hill and tells him she will not pay his gift bills for women.

Charlotte suspects that Hill and Phyllis are to meet in Atlantic City and goes there and saves her friend.

CHAPTER X

AT a quarter before one o'clock Charlotte was in the South Station at a point of vantage watching the gate to the New York train. She felt ashamed of her role and, in her heart she was hoping devoutly that her suspicions were false and unworthy but until she knew where Phyllis was going for her week end she would never have an easy moment.

Her heart turned to lead when she glimpsed Phyllis, intent and eager, hurrying toward the train gates with a small dressing case in her hand. Her surreptitious glance around as she slipped through the gate was proof that hers was no simple, every day errand.

Charlotte, conviction clutching at her heart like an icy hand, pushed her way through the gate just before it closed. She got into the last car of the train, already beginning to glide out of the station. She made her way, car by car, to a forward Pullman and there, in an obscure corner, her features almost hidden under the brim of a small drooping hat shielded by a veil, was Phyllis.

Charlotte paused a moment to take a grip on herself. Then she feigned a delighted, little start and dropped into the seat beside her friend.

Phyllis' dismay was pitiable when she turned and saw Charlotte. She went first crimson, and then deathly white.

"What—how—" she stammered.

Charlotte managed a delightful little chuckle.

"Isn't this great good fortune!" she laughed. "I had no idea that you were going away this week end. I only decided to go to Atlantic City this morning and when I rang you up to tell your maid said you were going somewhere, but she did not know where."

Phyllis' distress was evident.

"Why no—I—you see, I only made up my mind to go to Atlantic City a few hours ago. Dick is in Maine and I was frightfully lonely and when I got a wire this morning from Alicia Harding asking me to come down and join her for a few days, I just threw some things into a bag and came right away without telling anybody."

She was talking jerkily and her restless fingers were tearing her

8 MILLION IN STOKES ESTATE

Most of It Left to Son; Estranged Widow Seeks Delay of Funeral

New York, May 20 (I.N.S.).

The late W. E. D. Stokes, clubman, hotel owner and principal in many sensational court cases, left an estate valued approximately at $8,000,000, it was reported today.

Stokes died yesterday at seventy-three, a victim of double pneumonia, at his Hotel Ansonia.

The hotel is estimated as the largest of the Stokes holdings, its assessed value in 1926 being $4,550,000.

It was believed that the bulk of the estate would go to W. E. D. Stokes, Jr., son of the deceased financier and of the former Cuban beauty, Rita Hernandez de Alba d'Acosta, from whom Stokes was divorced in 1901.

Funeral services for Stokes, arranged today by the family, will be held on Saturday at the Church of the Incarnation. Interment will be in the Stokes family mausoleum.

WIDOW ON WAY TO N. Y.

Mrs. Helen Elw[illegible] Stokes, widow of the millionaire clubman, was en route to this city from Denver where she has been residing since her legal separation from Stokes.

She was accompanied by her two children, according to her lawyer, Samuel Untermeyer. Mrs. Stokes had asked that the funeral be delayed until her arrival.

N. Y. RISE IN FRENCH FRANC IS REFLECTED IN LONDON

London, May 20 (A.P.)—The sharp improvement in the value of the franc in New York was reflected here today in the earliest unofficial quotations. These were 33.09 to the dollar and 161 to the pound sterling, as against low quotations yesterday of respectively 35.10 and 170.80.

Paris, May 30 (A.P.)—The government announced through Finance Minister Peret after a Cabinet council today that it had decided to use every resource to support the franc.

FIVE-POUND SALMON SENT TO PRESIDENT

Rockwood, Me., May 20.—A five-pound landlocked salmon taken from Moose River near Moosehead Lake was shipped to President Coolidge by Mrs. Edith Scott Magna, of Holyoke, Mass., who, with her father, Col. KEEP PROMISES

DO YOU remember the terrible disappointment it was as a child for anyone to forget a promise?

"Next time I come I shall bring you this or that——"

And they forgot. But the child did not forget, and the grown-up's forgetfulness was one of its first disillusions.

This experience as a child has made me forever careful about promises. Why, the whole world would be a finer place if only everybody would do that one thing — keep every promise made.

Make but few but let nothing induce you to break them, once made. I have stuck to this tenaciously all through my life.

"I MAY do it, but I cannot promise."

"Why?"

"Because if I promise—or threaten—I shall keep my word even if the world blows up!"

One can only promise, of course, the things that depend on the maker of the promise alone, not upon circumstances beyond such control.

A Queen's life if full of obligations toward others, is, in fact, cut up by others all the time. It is the price she pays for being Queen. But, being Queen, I also consider my promise ten times sacred. A Queen can give pleasure or deal out disappointment; her word may change another's entire course; be almost a matter of life and death. More than another, then, her word must not be lightly given and NEVER broken.

This makes me a bit tough to deal with sometimes! But I have known people to be full of astonishment to find how absolutely I keep a promise, once given. Like the carrier of the King's message, neither rain, nor storm, nor personal inconvenience, risk, danger, darkness or flood must interfere.

Every child should be taught the principle of keeping promises, so that when they grow up they will realize a promise is a matter of honor, a law of their being. It is a trite saying, "My word is as good as my bond." Yet few in this world who do not make some promise lightly. I have even heard people say, "Oh, I promised—but I made a reservation in my mind." I have heard this spoken of the marriage vows.

This is wrong. Let us take promises seriously, not saying, "Oh, well, everybody knows there are some things you can't possibly promise. I'll say it, anyhow, nobody will hold me to it."

Say rather with the ancient poet:

"And though he promise to his loss,
He makes his promise good."

PROBE 'DUMMY' CASE WARRANTS

Examination of liquor case warrants issued in Roxbury [illegible] this year was made by Assistant District Attorney Alperts in [illegible]tion with the "dummy defendants" investigation by the Suffolk Grand Jury, it was learned.

With two stenographers, George McCaffrey, patrolman assigned to special duty at the district attorney's office, Alperts made a long study of the files and [illegible] in the clerk's office and [illegible] times was in conference with [illegible] chief by telephone.

The Grand Jury was expected to resume hearing evidence [illegible] case in which it is alleged [illegible] men were substituted for [illegible]lar defendants in liquor cases in Roxbury court.

JITNEY BOARD SCORES MAYOR

An open break between Mayor Nichols and the jitney license committee of the City Council was near today resulting from the adoption of two resolutions criticizing the city executive for frequent vetoes of license grants. Only the fear of being called "soreheads" prevented resignation of the entire [illegible].

The mayor was accused of looking to the Public Utilities Commission for guidance on all bus petitions, rendering the position of the license committee superfluous.

The breach was [illegible] the refusal of the mayor [illegible] prove the petitions of Frank [illegible] Hart for a Boston to A[illegible] and P. A. Chamberlain for a route in Hyde Park.

78 TO BE DROPPED JUNE 30

28 Are Staff, 50 Clerical Employes; 30 Young Women Among Number

By BERT FORD.

Seventy-eight employes at the Boston regional office of the Veterans' Bureau are to be dropped from the government payroll on June 30. Of this number, twenty-eight are staff and fifty clerical employes. Thirty of the latter are young women.

Reports from Washington concerning the ordered cut in the personnel at the Boston office appear to be clouded somewhat by misunderstanding and exaggeration.

The discharge of the seventy-eight employes will result from automatic suspension of vocational training, which will wipe out the rehabilitation division.

29 VETS IN GROUP.

The regrettable feature is that twenty-nine of those slated to go because of abandonment of the department are veterans and college men, most of them with battle records overseas.

Places for nine of them will be found in other departments, but twenty veterans must quit their jobs on June 30. There is no way to [illegible] them so far as further employment at the Veterans' Bureau is concerned. They and the 50 young men and girl clerks will be given a month's leave with pay under the law beginning July 1.

The [illegible] ousting of veterans from staff positions [illegible] will squelch rumors of alleged discrimination against [illegible] veteran employes.

ACCEPTED IN FINE SPIRIT.

Those affected by the cut are accepting it "in fine spirit," said Captain William J. Blake, regional manager, today. "They realize that their period of service will end on [illegible] and that the development [illegible] inevitable. Everybody regrets [illegible] conditions will compel severance of their duties and [illegible].

"Veterans are entitled to preference under the law. They are now [illegible] preference in civil service by being credited with five points as veterans and ten points if disabled.

"The cut will reduce our working force to 4[illegible]. As the vocational work will cease it will not affect the general efficiency of the bureau [illegible].

"[illegible] of force and expense [illegible] to be expected in the natural [illegible] of business as vocational and [illegible] work diminished. When I became regional manager [illegible] 1924, there were 13,500 [illegible] cases. At present there are but 1,389 in 29 hospitals within the Boston regional area."

In the presence of Governor Fuller, Mayor N[illegible] [illegible] presidents of the Senate, [illegible] of which George A. B[illegible] of Brookline is the present [illegible] [illegible] guests, a lifesize portrait of President Coolidge was today unveiled in the Senate [illegible].

The unveiling was done by Senator Charles H. [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible].

Following [illegible] Governor Fuller [illegible] [illegible] the painting is [illegible] of Boston.

SEES PHONE COFFERS BULGING

Attorney Moran Warns Governor High Rates to Continue if He Delays

Present high rates for telephone service in Boston and New England will be perpetuated unless the Massachusetts Public Utilities Commission grants an immediate rehearing in the telephone rate case and effects a revision of charges, Governor Fuller was warned in a letter today from Attorney Patrick T. Moran, a vigorous critic of the recent increase.

"In view of the recent bond issue of the New England Telephone & Telegraph [illegible] and the forthcoming new stock issue of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., it is evident the wealthy few who control these [illegible] and thus [illegible] in on their profits for years to come on the present excessive rates," wrote Moran.

"Unless some action is taken by the Department of Public Utilities [illegible] rehearing of the rate case these stock and bond issues will perpetuate the excessive rates [illegible] government aid and continue an unjust and heavy burden on the struggling worker.

DE LUXE TRAINS RUN TO COAST

The Chicago & Northwestern Railroad announces that schedules of the "Overland Limited," between Chicago and San Francisco, and the "Los Angeles Limited," between Chicago and Los Angeles, will be reduced to 63 hours, effective October, 1926. On account of the fast schedules an extra fare will be charged on these two de luxe trains.

They will leave Chicago in the evening and arrive in San Francisco and Los Angeles the morning of the third day, saving practically a business day. This same feature will of course apply also on Eastbound movement of these trains.

Owing to heavy travel, the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad also announces the inauguration of another Pacific Coast Flier operating on a 68-hour schedule to both Los Angeles and San Francisco, leaving Chicago at 10:30 p. m. daily. This means that the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad will be operating five Transcontinental trains daily.

Cool, health-giving breezes sweeping inland render the climate perfect for motoring.

As the beauty of Prince Edward Island delights the aesthetic so the natural food products satisfy the epicure.

PENN CREWS ARRIVE, TAKE TRIAL SPIN ON CHARLES

HARVARD IS FEARED BY SPUHN

Penn Junior Varsity Expected to Win; Tech Outfits Are Respected by Opponents

The University of Pennsylvania's three crews, varsity, junior varsity and freshman, arrived in Boston this morning in time to take the water for a practice spin. They are accompanied by Coahces Fred Spuhn and Max Luft, and are making their headquarters at the Hotel Lenox and their trials at the Weld boathouse.

Coach Spuhn believes that he has speeded up his boat considerably by a late shift which places Kelleher at No. 2 in the varsity boat, moving Jordan from No. 4 to Kelleher's place in the junior varsity, and Fayle changing from 2 to 4 in the varsity. Kelleher is heavier than Jordan bringing the average to 171 pounds.

Spuhn expects the junior varsity to win, but is not as certain of the varsity shell. Harvard, he thinks, is to be feared and Tech has made a record which also evokes respect.

The shells which were shipped from Philadelphia to the Weld boat house are in charge of Rigger John Fitzpatrick, formerly with Princeton.

The Penn crews will row in this order Saturday:

Varsity—Bow, Charles T. [illegible], No. 2, J. J. Kelleher, No. 3, [illegible] K. Elliott, No. 4, [illegible] R. Fayle, No. 5, John R. Sebastian, No. 6, Beauveau Borie, No. 7, Fred C. Gentsch; stroke, Don [illegible] Irmiger; coxswain, [illegible] W. [illegible].

Junior varsity—Bow, James B. Bailey, No. 2, Herman J. Jordan, No. 3, Albert [illegible], Jr., No. 4, Lee P. McLean, No. 5, Walter A. Johnson, No. 6, Edward R. McKinley, No. 7, J. J. Penny; stroke, Stanwood Sweitzer; coxswain, John P. Berry.

Burkland is from Springfield Tech High School and Ashley from Exeter.

Tech's 150-Pound Crew Favored Over Harvard

In previous years, mention of a 150-pound crew race would have caused little excitement among college sport fans, but tomorrow will see thousands witnessing a 'fifty' race that abounds with local interest.

The reason for the sudden change in enthusiasm for the 'fifties' is that Technology is to race Harvard on the Charles.

The Engineer crew has already licked Yale and Princeton and is determined to make a clean sweep of the 'Big Three' boats by dusk tomorrow afternoon.

Boasting of the greatest 150-pound boats in the country, Tech is a big favorite but it is a sure bet that the Harvard crew will not be beaten until the race is over.

To-day will be the second race of the season for the Harvard crew. It was beaten last Saturday by Princeton but showed plenty of pluck.

The Tech crew is coached by Dave Scudder, a student at that institution. Scudder rowed seven in the Tech boat during the last Olympic trials. In his spare time he has produced a crew that bids fair to top all of the Big Three boats.

The lineups:

TOUGH CUSTOMER

PAL REED, FIGHTING FIGHTER

Pal is matched with Hambone Kelly in the open-air show of the Suffolk A. A. at Braves Field, June 1. This is a wise move, as they don't come any gamier than Pal, who will take all the socks that Kelly can deliver. It should be a real fight.

YANKS REACH MUIRFIELD COURSE

Muirfield, Scotland, May 20.—The members of America's Walker Cup team arriving here today for practice in preparation for the British amateur golf championship next week, found that Chick Evans had stolen a march on them.

The Chicago star already has had a week of intensive golf over the difficult fairways and greens on which the amateur title will be decided, while the Walker Cup players have been rushed from one golf course to another and from one dinner course to another all over Southern England.

Great interest has been aroused in [illegible] for the championship [illegible].

British Pros to Seek Honors Here Next Year

London, May 20 (A P)—A team of British professional golf players, probably twenty strong, will invade the United States in the summer of [illegible] in a series of exhibition matches and play [illegible] match [illegible] Americans. They will then enter the American [illegible] important [illegible].

[illegible] professionals [illegible] pairs have toured the United States for years but a British team has [illegible]. The [illegible] will be organized [illegible] the [illegible] Anglo-American professional battle [illegible] for the Walker Cup.

TAYLOR, SUGGS NEXT ON GRAHAM'S LIST

New York, May 20 (A P)—Bushy Graham, Utica, N. Y., bantamweight, who defeated the former American flyweight champion Frankie Genaro, here Monday night faces a busy summer program.

He has been matched against the flashy Chick Suggs of New Bedford, Mass., for the main bout at Madison Square Garden June 4 and also is down for a meeting with Bud Taylor of Terre Haute at Coney Island Stadium.

Steinke Picked to Win Over 3 Opponents

By JACK CONWAY

HANS STEINKE, German heavyweight champion, will top an all-star mat card at the Boston Arena tonight at a show staged under the direction of Joseph Taramaschi. Steinke will meet three opponents who have not yet been named. As the German is one of the best of the big fellows, he should topple ordinary opposition without much trouble.

Wladek Zbyszko, Polish heavyweight, will also appear on the same card. He is billed to take on Kusnocoff, Russian wrestler. Zbyszko should come through with a victory if he wrestles up to form.

Frank Leavitt, Miami, Fla., police wrestler, will oppose Angelo Taramaschi, Italian heavyweight, in another bout. Leavitt, is making a wrestling tour of the world and is eager to win in his Boston debut.

Jack Conway

There will also be three other bouts. John Mahoney of South Boston will tackle Jack McCarthy of Newark, Abe Kaplan, Jewish champion, will collide with Louis Bruno of New York, while Guisseppi Massetti of Italy will mingle with Tom Draak of Holland.

IT is seldom that a boxer has scored as big in his first feature bout as Sammy Fuller of the North End did in his engagement with Chick Suggs. Fuller, a youth of twenty years, with a background of only twenty bouts, made his big league debut against the world's leading 124-pounder. Instead of permitting this fact to awe him Fuller fought the greatest battle of his career and kept the champion on the defensive most of the time. He also shook up the [illegible] Suggs with some of his [illegible] punches.

You will hear a great deal of Fuller in the future as he is destined to go a long ways along the pugilistic trail.

IT was a wise move on the part of Matchmaker Tom Goodwin of the Suffolk A. A. to sign Pal Reed of Natick to meet Hambone Kelly in one of the ten-round bouts at the first open air show at Braves Field on June 1. Reed is one of the toughest middleweights in the world and is usually in there fighting from bell to bell. He won't back away [illegible] because [illegible] is a puncher. When he fought Jack Delaney at Madison Square Garden he stuck his chin out in an effort to bring Delaney out of his shell. Anybody who can take Delaney's socks without passing out of the picture will make things mighty interesting for Hambone.

The ten-round semi-final will feature Jimmy Jones of Youngstown, Ohio, and Buddy Clark of Sa[illegible].

AL MELLO, New England welterweight champion and Jack Zivic of Pittsburgh will do the heavy cannonading in the big tent [illegible].

Zivic has knocked out Nate G[illegible]man, Lew Tendler, Archie Walker and Buddy Barrett, while he has decisions to his credit over Pal Doyle, Tommy Milligan and Wilbur Larmer. All of which points to a hectic battle for our New England champion.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER B. HORTON

The expert golfer hits the ball exactly where he wishes to hit it. That is, he makes the club face strike the ball above its centre, or below, when swinging a wood club as well as the iron. Thus he imparts underspin or overspin to the long ball as well as with the shorter approach shot. The midiron push shot of 200 yards is made by the expert player to hold the green because of the underspin imparted to the ball while the tee shot, driven against the wind, can be so energized with overspin that the ball will roll enough to make up for the wind resistance. Not only is this easily possible with the golf ball but it is a common thing with finished players to impart the straight overspin, or underspin so that the ball will neither hook nor slice.

Dorchester to Play Giants

Joe Kendrick's Dorchester Town Team will play the Philadelphia Colored Giants tomorrow evening at Dorchester Town Field. Last Monday the Giants met defeat at the hands of Dorchester by a 6 to 4 score.

Tomorrow's contest should bring out the largest crowd of the season as Kendrick's outfit proved its worth in downing a team which won more than 30 ball games in and around Boston last year.

Ashworth, Dorchester backstop, has been playing fine ball as has the outfield trio, Cleary, Quinn and White.

The Dawn of a Better Cigarette
THIS IS IT!

The landing of the jolly ROGERS and the jolly Williams, Johns & Georges

IT isn't only the Rogers who are jolly these days—since OLD GOLD came to port.

It's the Johns and Georges, the Williams and Freds and every mother's son who relishes a superior cigarette.

For not only has OLD GOLD itself landed in town; it has landed and won the town's most exacting cigarette connoisseurs.

OLD GOLD is a better cigarette; that's the reason.

It is COOLER—because made from lighter and finer tobacco leaf, hand selected.

It is MILDER—because a new day method takes out any hidden harshness in the tobacco which ordinary curing may not subdue.

It is MORE FRAGRANT—because it is made from the choicest of all Turkish and domestic tobaccos, chosen and blended by old masters.

But we'd rather you wouldn't take our opinion alone. Buy a package of OLD GOLDS and judge for yourself.

We'll gladly accept your verdict from the evidence you smoke out of that first package.

700 'INVITES' SENT OUT FOR GOLF JOUST

ONE week from today, the Belmont Country Club four-ball tournament will start. This will be a three-day tourney, running through to Saturday. The Waverly club has sent out over 700 invitations and it is expected that the largest field in the history of a Belmont four-ball will compete for the wonderful array of prizes offered.

There were 80 pairs in this tournament last year, 28 starting the first day, 3[illegible] the second and 31 on the [illegible] day. From the responses the [illegible] club has received there will be well over 200 starters. Although this tournament will not open for a week, all the starting times for the [illegible] days are [illegible].

Bill Grimes

Francis Ouimet and Milton W[illegible] Vedder of Belmont were the winners last year. This pair was three strokes behind Freddie Wright and Tom McGinn at the [illegible] of the first [illegible] holes. Wright and McGinn had a better ball of 64 for their first round, while Ouimet and Vedder had a 67.

In the afternoon round the best at the all-Belmont team could do was a 68, but Ouimet and Vedder turned in a 62 [illegible] great performance over the difficult Belmont course, which gave them a total for 36 holes of 129 against 132 for Wright and McGinn. Eddie Lowery and Wilfred Ouimet were three strokes behind Wright and McGinn. [illegible] McPhail and Warren Hopkins [illegible] a four [illegible]

As the play in the coming four-ball tournament will be from the back tees, many of which are new since last year, the field will find the scoring far more difficult than it was a year ago. The new [illegible] green is far superior to the old one, but it is one of the hardest par 4 holes on the course playing from the new back tee. The field will find that the new 17th green is easier than the old one but the 16th is considerably harder.

This tournament will allow the players one-half of their State handicap and calls for the teams planning to take part in this four-ball tournament to write for their starting times at once.

Babe Six Days Ahead of Record

New York, May 20 (I N S).—With two brand-new home runs added to his growing collection, Babe Ruth today was far ahead of his 1921 record when he set his record-breaking mark of fifty-nine clouts.

In 1921 the Yankee slugger hit his fourteenth home run in the thirty-seventh game of the season on May 29. Yesterday he hammered out his thirteenth and fourteenth homers of the 1926 season in the thirty-first game on May 19.

Six games and ten days ahead of the record that baseball experts declared would never be equaled. Six games [illegible] days up after sports experts were [illegible] the sad story of his passing. Great indeed is the mighty Babe.

BRAVES OUT TO STOP CUBS AGAIN

Chicago, May 20.—Joe Genewich, [illegible] boy of the Boston Braves, is slated to toe the mound this afternoon and give the Braves their second successive win over Joe McCarthy's rejuvenated Bruins. Opposing Joseph will be one Tony Kaufman, one of the very good National League right-handers and especially effective against the Hub entry on most occasions.

Mister Genewich, according to reports, has received several tongue lashings from his boy manager since the outfit hit the trails. Today will prove whether the pilot's tongue has had any effect on Elmira Joe. If events prove that Joseph has not benefited by the advice and [illegible] of the boss then [illegible] will probably leave [illegible] of the [illegible] for parts unknown before long.

Southpaw Benny Hearn pitched great ball in the opening game of the series and the Braves broke their losing streak, which had reached six games, winning 5 to [illegible]. Bill Piercy started on the mound for the Cubs and went fine for three innings, but while enjoying a one-run lead in the fourth he went all to pieces, the Braves bunching hits for four runs and it was over but the shouting.

By SID MERCER

Scranton, Pa., May 20.—Any doubt as to the excellence of Mickey Walker's condition for his [illegible] with Pete Latzo here [illegible] has been dispelled by Mickey himself.

Before he sought the [illegible] of his room at the [illegible] Walker limbered up for half an hour at the gymnasium of [illegible] weighed a little less than 146 [illegible] at the end of the workout. He went direct from the train yesterday to the gymnasium, accompanied by Jack Kearns and his trainers, Teddy Hayes and Bill Bloxham, and breezed through his exercises before a [illegible] throng of enthusiasts who broke out into a [illegible] cheer for Mickey when he stepped on to the floor to [illegible].

There is every evidence today that Walker does not [illegible] a set-up. He has never trained so thoroughly for a fight. It is Mickey's first start against [illegible] since [illegible] the weight has not been [illegible] and he has not found it necessary to resort to strict diet.

There isn't much betting. Walker is the favorite at odds that go as high as 3 to 1.

FIGHTS I CAN'T FORGET by TAD America's Greatest Boxing Authority

Nelson Outpunched Attell

THIS is the fiftieth of a series of famous fights covered by Tad, the greatest sporting cartoonist and leading authority on pugilism in this country.

ABE ATTELL got away with a chunk of glory for the great fight he put up against Battling Nelson in Philadelphia on May 22, 1905. He certainly put up the rhubarb article. It was rich, rare and juicy while it lasted, and a treat that will long be remembered.

There is hardly a punch known to pugilism that he failed to slip over on the Hegewisch man. He just battered him with left and right rips, [illegible] uppercuts for sake of variety, and at the end of the third round the Dane was covered with blood. Abe did everything he could to his opponent in those three rounds, and at one time had Nelson wabbling on his pins. He had the worst of the weights, but the best of the match.

For three rounds Mr. Attell—after that you just scratch his name and begin to tell stories of the gent with the tow head and the [illegible] blue eyes who up to this time was taking an awful gruelling, and he took it like a man. Never once did the Dane attempt a foul trick. He took what Attell had and came back for more.

IT was different, though, when it came to Abe's turn to lick up a little beating. Just as soon as the tide of battle changed his seconds and friends at the ringside opened their faces and out with the merry [illegible] "Look out for his head, referee." "He's holding Abe." "Make him [illegible] that elbow down." "He's foul."

Abe didn't like the going, however, and whenever Mr. Nelson got in a few, out with the arms like an octopus, and the way he hugged Bat was a caution.

Not only did he hug and clinch Nelson to stop the going, but he actually grabbed his abuser by the neck one time and threw him to the floor.

Yes, it was too hard for the clever boy. He stuck it out, though, and managed to hold the Dane [illegible] the sweet strains of the gong floated across the ring, releasing him from further trouble with the Western bull.

Nelson was a fish to make a six-round go with Attell in the first place. We all knew that Abe had no peer as a short-fight man, and [illegible] take the chance that Nelson did was—well, if I had his rep I'd say [illegible] bring me in some nice, big, fat stuff that can't move around much."

Yale Figures to Win Meet With Harvard

By STED CHANDLER

Yale, with a record of seven victories in the last eight meets with Harvard, comes to Cambridge again Saturday as a heavy favorite. The surprising strength shown by the Elis against Princeton last week bodes no good for the Crimson athletes, and the report that George Connors' contingent has set 13 first places as its goal is indicative of the power which must breed such confidence.

Harvard's hopes are higher than that the Crimson even going so far as to claim more firsts than her rival. It seems hardly likely, however, that Connors' clan can be kept away from at least ten, and probably eleven first places. The score, on paper, promises to exceed that of last year, when the Bulldog conquered 79½ to 55½.

Our estimate, which is tinged slightly blue not because of any prejudice but because of a [illegible] or of the facts, places the final count at approximately 85½ to 46½. That is purely a paper estimate, and it would not be surprising, in view of the competition inspired by the ancient rivalry, to see Harvard pull out of it better than that.

Sted Chandler

In reaching these figures we gave first places to Hogan of Yale in the half mile and to Paulsen of Yale in the 440. It is altogether probable that Soapy Watters and [illegible] Kane will have [illegible] about that. [illegible] dicted upon the [illegible] will double in the [illegible] Hogan's best time this year in the half is 1.56 4-5.

BUDGET HELPS PLAN THE NEW HOME

Boston Evening American Offers Aid to Housewives in Planning Expenditures of Income

BUDGET TALK NO. 56

By MARTHA LEE

WHILE the Spring bride's nose is flattened against the window of the gown shops, the prospective groom is apt to be found juggling figures and wondering just how much it is going to cost to furnish the new vine and fig tree.

These savings usually represent real self denial on the young man's part—often spread over a term of years—and I always feel badly to see this precious money spent as ill advisedly as it often is.

In buying your furniture don't be influenced by the fad of the moment. It will pass and leave you with a collection of furniture that you must live with years after the fad is gone and forgotten.

How much will it take to furnish a four room house? That is the question most frequently asked. No hard and fast rule can be made but I can give you an idea of the expense of completely equipping the new home in merchandise of the first quality.

Today I am going to start in the living room and give you a skeleton sketch of furniture prices showing three estimates A, B & C to fit three grades of incomes. These figures do not cover special bargains, just first class merchandise at standard prices.

(b) $[illegible] 3 piece suite or 3 odd pieces, library table, bookcase, separate chair, spinet desk.

(c) $496, includes, 3-piece suite or equivalent, library table, bookcase or occasional pieces, separate chair, spinet desk.

(b) $17.75, includes: 1 wrought iron reading lamp with parchment shade, 1 table lamp with decorative shade.

(c) $40, includes: floor lamp with silk shade, table lamp with shade.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Dear Mrs. L. J.: I am glad that you are going to start budgeting. Even if you are the busiest woman in seven towns I know you can find ten minutes a day which is all you need to give up to successful budgeting. After yesterday's budget article if everything is not clear, do write again.

Mrs. M. A. W. asks for a budget for a family of nine (seven adults and two children, six and seven). Rent is $28, insurance $3.75 a week, light $3 a month, coal and wood $20 a month in Winter, milk $2 a week; has no definite allowance for food. Owes $150 back bill. Weekly income $35.

First I will give you the figures a standard budget allows for $35, and then we'll see how it can be juggled to suit your special requirements. Budget gives $[illegible] savings, $7.50 for shelter, $[illegible] food, $[illegible] for clothing, $[illegible] for operating and $4 for personal.

Your rent, you see, is in the [illegible] proportion, as $6.50 weekly will cover it, and this leaves an additional dollar for husband's business carfares. You will have to pare 75 cents a week off your clothing budget to add to the savings in order to pay $3.75 a week insurance premium out of your savings fund. By putting $5 weekly in your operating envelope you will have a good start on your Winter's coal, as well as taking care of your present light and fuel bill. Personal is supposed to take care of all other expenses. One dollar a week will have to come out of this to be paid on the back bill of $150.

On account of the size of your family, you will have to pare some money off your other allotments to add to your food allowance. It looks as if you would have to sacrifice on clothing for the present.

Mrs. L. R. asks for a budget. Income $40 a week, two in the family, rent $12 a month (lives in the country), has two doctor's visits each week, owes $116 on furniture, pays $1.73 for insurance. Has a car which her husband uses to go to work. Pays about $12 for food. Is building a little home on a lot they own. Buys lumber and when it is used, buys more. Has trouble getting [illegible]. Husband built home himself in his spare time. Is a carpenter. In general expenses are furniture $5, groceries $12, rent $3, doctor $4, insurance $1 [illegible] husband's suit $5 weekly, lumber $10.

Dear lady, you realize that this means $46.23 a week and you have only $40 to spend. My first suggestion is that you have the payments on clothing and furniture reduced from $6 to $1 a week on each.

Then, too, I know that two people can be well fed on less than $12 a week, if you will make a real study of marketing and menus.

I know your husband will want to assassinate me when I say that $2.50 is too high for tobacco each week since this and all the expenses of running the car and the doctor's bill are supposed to come out of the personal fund, besides newspapers, magazines, church and club dues, amusements, dentist's bill and gifts.

Although you will have to make a good many sacrifices while you are building the new home, I know that in the end you will feel a thousand times repaid. But don't forget that no one can continue to accumulate bills in excess of their income without getting into deep water. The only solution in your case seems to be having the weekly payments for furniture and clothing reduced and stretched over a longer time.

Serviss on Use of Opera Glasses

By Garrett P. Serviss.

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

A FEW days ago, while rummaging on the top shelf of a corner bookcase among a congeries of microscopes, opera glasses, stereoscopes, photographic appliances and amateur drawing paraphernalia, my eye was caught by a faded scarlet velvet opera glass case or bag, and I pounced upon it like a boy grabbing a butterfly, for I instantly remembered what it contained. I drew out the neglected treasure with almost trembling fingers, for in an instant it carried me back nearly 40 years to the time when I was preparing to write my first book.

It was the old opera glass with which I surveyed the heavens from Aries round to Pisces and from the North Polar star to the southern horizon of 40 degree north latitude, in order to see for myself what so simple an instrument could reveal of the celestial wonders.

As I carefully brushed and wiped the lenses there sprang into my mind a vivid picture of the purlieu in which I bought the instrument. It was an old Chatham street pawnshop, for I had more knowledge than money. I was not to be cheated about such things, but I could not afford to buy of the quality that I wanted at regular dealers' prices.

A glance at the fascinating heap of everything that the shop window contained showed me a plainly mounted opera glass that had a look of distinction, and I entered the shop and pointed it out to the dealer. He handed me in succession several inferior specimens, which I refused to touch.

"Let me see that," I said.

"Four-dollars-and-a-half," he almost shouted, handing it out.

The moment I looked through the glasses I tendered him the price. Regretfully he took it, keeping his eyes on the object until I slipped it into my pocket.

"Y' c'n see twenty miles with them glasses," he said, with a tone which seemed to me to moan. "O, why didn't I ask ten!"

"I'll try to see farther than that," I replied as I left the shop.

It was a pair of good English make, marked "Millikan & Hawley, 165 Strand, London." Many a time afterward I positively felt a twinge of pity for the original owner who had put so excellent a possession in hock and been unable to reclaim it.

That glass, as I have said, furnished me with the material for my first book. And looking at it again now, recalling the delightful, though simple, knowledge that was equivalent to discovery, since I obtained it at first hand, I am led to advise everybody who has an opera glass to try it on the stars.

You should not stop disappointed if at first you see nothing to wonder at. To the untrained observer a first view even through a great telescope is often a disenchantment. You must know how to look and what to expect. Of course the size and power of the glass have much to do with the result. If your opera glass has achromatic object-lenses not less than an inch and a half in diameter, with achromatic eye-lenses giving a magnification of between three and four diameters, it will answer perhaps as well as the one I used.

Let me be specific. Try the full moon, comparing carefully the naked eye view of it with that afforded by the glass. It will show you, as they say in New Jersey, "quite some" lunar scenery on a large scale. For the Pleiades and the Hyades most glorious clusters you must wait until Winter; but Berenice's Hair is shining near the zenith on May evenings, every thread tipped with a minute diamond and Spica in the Virgin and Arcturus in Bootes, both first magnitude stars, show their contrasted colors—pure and white and rich topaz—with beautiful effect. Look back and forth from one to the other several times.

Later, in the Summertime you will have Scorpio, with fire-red Antares in his heart, and the long crooked row of double brilliants that mark his curved back and up-bent tail, ending with two stars in the sting. And, still more attractive you will have that rich region of the Milky Way, compact of starry clouds, that pours like a torrent over the southern horizon in Sagittarius and rises like a silvery thunderhead in Sobieski's Shield, to the east of serpent-bearing Ophiuchus. But the whole celestial stage is filled with beauties for those who know how to use their opera glasses in that sublime theatre.

Best Advice to the Lovelorn Ones

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I've been married just a year and am finding my marriage a failure. We quarrel constantly over finances.

My husband makes about one hundred dollars a week but he is economical in the extreme. There has never been a time when I needed to buy anything that he didn't make a fuss over the expense.

We make our home in a very cheap apartment with cheap furnishings. I am ashamed to invite anyone to visit me.

I have talked things over calmly with my husband but he refuses to listen and insists on getting along as he sees fit.

I am not extravagant and am much more economical than I ever was before in my life. I feel that this constant quarreling will cause a break. So won't you please help me out?

LEONA.

DON'T allow difference of opinion on the financial question to wreck your marriage unless your husband absolutely refuses to support you. After all, even though he may be a little over-careful about finances, that's a failing that leans to virtue's side, isn't it? So try agreeing with him instead of quarreling, and see how much happier you both will be.

Ask him, however, if he will not give you a certain fixed weekly or monthly allowance on which to run the house, anything you save out of it to be your own to do with exactly as you wish.

If he should not agree to this why do you not try to find some sort of part-time work you can do at home, such as sewing or making lamp shades? Use the money you earn this way exactly as you see fit. But don't quarrel. Nagging will only wear you both out and kill love, which is the sweetest, most precious thing in life.

The Making of a Husband, Ann Lisle's Serial

By Ann Lisle

"I'LL get a doctor," Jim said. "And a nurse, if you like."

"Why?" I asked.

"You must feel miserable."

"I feel fine."

Jim stared at me suspiciously.

"I'm losing a fine chance to play on your sympathy," I said with laughter welling up in my throat. "But my night in the woods left me feeling clear and exhilarated, and aware of the fact that we often pity ourselves very foolishly."

"You might have been set upon by tramps—or have taken your death of cold," Jim cried in a tone of self reproach.

"I thought of wildcats," I said [illegible].

Then Jim laughed. He came and took me in his arms and asked tenderly:

"Next time I get absorbed in a foolish paper, you take it away and remind me of this—won't you?"

"I wonder if it would do any good?" I asked laughingly.

"But, however—may I act, you know I love you, don't you?" Jim urged. "And you understand that men feel love often when they don't make it?"

Again all I could reply was, "I wonder!"

My night in the woods did me more good than harm. I didn't catch cold or become the victim of any physical difficulty because of cold and damp and exposure. But Jim caught a glimpse of the working of feminine emotions when [illegible] had a decided effect on him. He was as attentive and devoted as if we were just starting on our honeymoon.

D[illegible] we had a lot of jolly times and a few highly romantic ones. On the evening after my adventure in the woods Jim insisted on going with me to see the [illegible] I had traversed. The moon was obliging enough to [illegible]

"[illegible] a little house in this clearing and hide his lady love here," Jim said when we came to the scene of my night's lodging. "I've a great mind to try to get title to the place and build a little cottage here—a Wayside Repose—in honor of you."

We laughed gaily at this brand of humor, enjoying it as much as we did that of a world famous comedian whose opening night in a new revue we took in later in the week.

There was only one episode to annoy me during the fortnight that passed so smoothly and joyously. It [illegible] one evening when we were visiting Nicholas Perry, for whom I felt a great pity mingled with a mental distaste.

"See anything of Jeanie?" he asked casually, as Arlette Valleau was passing some delicious coffee and cake of Mrs. Cruikshank's providing.

"We were at the theatre with Jeanie and Pat last night," Jim replied flatly. "We had a mighty nice time, too. For two old married couples we managed to get all the fun there was going—"

"Why not?" demanded Mr. Perry. "I [illegible] your wife can [illegible] ever seen [illegible] And Jeanie [illegible] glee [illegible]"

"My wife and my sister confine their stories [illegible] to occasions when they are with their husbands," Jim replied in the stilted fashion with which he often meets moments that threaten to swamp him.

"On the brink!" Nicholas Perry said lightly. "Your sister and I were great pals in the olden days. By the way, I wonder if she wants that unfinished portrait of herself I was working on before my hands went blooey?"

A little moan from Arlette interrupted us. It bore out my notion that this exquisitely beautiful cold and seemingly unawakened child is capable of glowing moments of vital [illegible] Nicholas Perry to [illegible] her heart.

"[illegible] would be well enough," she [illegible]. "They's all paint. Doctor [illegible] have promise me. And I [illegible] think the promise he [illegible] I think he like me very [illegible]."

"He wants me to get well so I can paint a portrait of you as Joan of Arc and immortalize you," said Nicholas Perry curtly. "I think he wants that more than he ever wanted anything else. But this red velvet 'Portrait of a Lady'—of Jeanie annoys him. I think for Dad Willis' sake I'd better ship it to Jeanie. It might be years until I could finish it."

As he spoke I recalled the amazing moment when the aristocratic old patriarch Dr. Jabez Willis had told me that little Arlette Valleau was [illegible] great grandchild, since Rosa[illegible] was the child of an earl, love he had known briefly as a boy and forgotten.

New Way Eradicates Wrinkles Like Magic

A simple Tarkroot mixture, spread over the entire face, acts almost magically upon even the deepest wrinkles and crowsfeet. It produces the natural rejuvenating effect of massage, only to a more marked degree. The danger of loosening the skin or muscles, as in unscientific or too frequent massaging, is eliminated, no rubbing being necessary. On the other hand, the skin and underlying tissues are so invigorated they become much firmer, and the skin's texture is so changed it again assumes its original clear, smooth, velvety appearance.

If you will procure a package of Powdered Tarkroot from your druggist, mix a spoonful with a spoonful of lemon juice, apply with the fingers, and sit down before your mirror, you will see the wrinkles and age lines disappear in less than 15 minutes! You will be amazed, to say the least. Tarkroot, of course, is perfectly harmless. And certainly it is inexpensive; a treatment costs less than three cents!

Absorbing Story of Life in Boston Today Is Revealed

Charlotte averted her gaze; she wanted to believe Phyllis and she hoped with all her heart that it was really to Alicia Harding that Phyllis was going and that Larry Hill had nothing to do with her going to Atlantic City.

But why, she asked herself, should Phyllis have been so dismayed to encounter her, if she were on such an innocent trip as the visit she described.

She determined to let no inkling of her suspicion reach Phyllis, but at the same time she resolved to ascertain the truth of Phyllis' story. She dared not warn Phyllis against Larry Hill for fear of Hill's revenge but at least, she could save her friend from committing some irremediable folly.

From New York they took the Atlantic City express. Phyllis was very quiet during the journey.

"I'm going to make a dash for it, if you don't mind," she told Charlotte hurriedly on arrival. "Alicia probably is waiting for me and I don't want to make her too late for dinner. I'll ring you up first thing in the morning. You'll be at the Ambassador, you say?"

She was the first passenger to reach the station platform. She lost herself immediately in the crowd, and there was no sign either of her or Mrs. Harding when Charlotte went into the station.

Charlotte thought a minute, and then feeling utterly contemptible in her role of self-appointed sleuth, rang up the hotel where Phyllis had said Alicia Harding was stopping.

A switchboard attendant informed her that Mrs. Harding had checked out that morning and returned to Boston.

Charlotte's doubt then became a certainty.

She signaled a taxi and ordered the chauffeur to drive her to the hotel where she knew Larry Hill always stopped.

An assiduous porter rushed forward, anticipating luggage. For the first time, Charlotte remembered that she was alone in a strange city, many miles from home, without so much as a handbag.

She Finds Phyllis

She was frightened and her knees trembled under her at the thought of what she was about to do; at the mere suggestion of the terrible vengeance Hill would undoubtedly wreak upon her if she interfered with one of his amusing little pastimes. But the determination to save Phyllis from the results of her folly sustained Charlotte, and with as much poise as she could command, she approached the desk and inquired for Hill.

"What name, please?" the girl at the switchboard asked.

"Don't announce me," Charlotte said quickly. "I merely want to talk to Mr. Hill over the telephone."

She was not clear in her mind what plan of action she intended to pursue. She must, at all costs, avoid a scene. She dared not consult the hotel register to ascertain if Hill were alone. It would attract undesirable attention to herself.

"Mr. Hill has just gone out," the girl informed her, consulting a memorandum on the board before her. "He has asked that all calls be held for him. He'll be back in a quarter of an hour."

"Thank you; I'll wait then. No, it's not necessary to leave a message, but—er—what is the number of Mr. Hill's apartment?"

The girl indifferently said, "316."

A bell-boy piloted Charlotte to 316.

"The sitting room is the next door," he said. "I guess you will find the lady waiting for you. I just took her up a little while ago."

Charlotte's heart leaped. So there was a woman after all! But was she Phyllis?

She knocked at the door.

Her heart was beating suffocatingly and her knees would hardly hold her. Suppose some strange woman whom she had never seen before should open the door? Or worse yet suppose the woman who was spending the week-end here with Hill was the girl called Mercedes, or one of the others of that gay crowd whom she had been forced to entertain in her home that Winter?

There was no answer to her first hesitant rap, but she felt, even through the heavy panels of the door, the sense of suddenly arrested movement inside. She knew for a certainty someone had paused and was listening breathlessly.

She rapped again this time three slow taps followed by two short ones. It was a special knock which Hill used when he entered her sitting room unannounced. He even employed the signal on his motor horn when he wished to summon anyone without leaving his car. Any friend of his would be familiar with that knock. It worked like a charm. The door opened cautiously an inch or two and a woman's voice whispered,

"Is it you, Larry?"

For answer, Charlotte pushed the door wide, entered like a flash and closed it sharply behind her.

She found herself facing Phyllis. A frightened, white-cheeked, wide eyed Phyllis. But before Charlotte could speak, Phyllis burst forth violently:

Attacks Charlotte

"You followed me! You spy! You cheat! And you have lied to me, too! You have told me you didn't want Larry and yet here you are to take him from me! You are in love with him! I hate you! You're despicable—a false friend—a traitor!"

Charlotte ignored Phyllis' outburst.

She reached out and grasped her wrist and with a forefinger to her lips enjoined discretion, for Phyllis' voice was shrill with hysteria.

Charlotte realized that the time was passed when she could deal gently with Phyllis. Arguments had failed, and strong measures were now necessary.

"Do be more quiet," she said sharply. "Do you want to rouse the whole hotel? I didn't come here for the reason you think. I loathe Larry Hill with all my heart and soul, but I love you, Phyllis, and you've got to listen to me. I won't let you throw away your whole future for the sake of a silly whim."

Phyllis tried to wrench herself free.

"It's not a silly whim," she said stubbornly. "I adore Larry, he is the only man in the world for me."

"Larry isn't worth your little finger," Charlotte interrupted her. "I could tell you—oh, what I couldn't tell you! He has ruined my life and I am not going to stand quietly by and see him ruin yours."

"You are jealous!" flamed Phyllis. "All this fine talk is just to keep another woman from getting him."

Charlotte gave a short laugh.

"I wish," she said breathlessly, "that some other woman had got him long before he met me. Phyllis you've got to listen, you can't do this dreadful thing to Dick."

"Dick is nothing to me any more." Phyllis twisted out of Charlotte's grasp and raised her head defiantly. "No man is except Larry. Even Phil has done everything he could to stop me, but nothing can keep me from Larry now."

Charlotte drew a deep breath, she had only one card left to play and when she had played it, she knew that she sealed her own doom. All her sacrifice would have been in vain. She would bring down upon herself, Manning, and her innocent family, the disgraceful fate which her bargain with Hill had averted.

"Phyllis, if no argument, if no thought of decency, will stop you, then you will have to know the truth about Larry Hill. He is a blackguard of the worst sort, a contemptible and unscrupulous adventurer. He is——"

A sudden rap at the door set both women tense. Charlotte's sentence remained suspended in the air. Her eyes met Phyllis' questioningly. She could feel her knees trembling. If it were Hill——

But surely he would not knock at his own door.

The rap came again, imperatively.

"Yes, who is it?" Charlotte's voice was husky, hardly more than a whisper, and a man's voice, equally hoarse and a sharp command, answered:

"Allow me to enter at once, if you please. I must see Mr. Lawrence Hill."

For a moment Charlotte hesitated but she remembered swiftly that the door was unlocked and that the newcomer could easily force an entrance if he chose.

She thrust Phyllis, unresisting, through the doorway into the bed room and closed the door after her.

A hurried glance around assured her that none of Phyllis' belongings were in the sitting room. She apparently had left hat and wrap and bag in the bedroom beyond.

The man in the hall outside was already impatiently turning the door-knob when she flew to intercept him.

The door swung open and Charlotte found herself facing Dick Fenway, a hard, angry, red-visaged Dick with a savage light in his eyes that she had never seen before.

She felt her heart stop beating for an instant. The lights danced around her in a dizzy fashion and she thought she was going to faint, but the urge of necessity and the pain her nails inflicted as she dug them deeply into the flesh of her palms, kept her on her feet.

With a burning flush of shame suffusing her face and throat, she still managed to force a little laugh and to say with a sort of coy embarrassment:

"This is rather a surprise, Dick, I—er—we didn't expect you."

His eyes went through her like steel gimlets and she flinched under them.

"So it is you!" he said slowly. "Thank heaven!"

His gaze traveled around the room, noted its emptiness, came back to her and withered her under its scorn.

"I see your—lover is not here. It is well, for I would have difficulty in keeping myself from horsewhipping him, for the sake of Dave's honor and for the sake of what you once were."

"Why are you here?" Charlotte's stiff lips formed the words.

"Because some woman—some other favorite of his, no doubt, called me to the 'phone when I came home from Maine and told me that my wife had come here [illegible]

Cupid Happy as the Seasons Change

IDEAS
BATHING GIRLS

THOSE souls still young enough, or persistent enough, to dream of a Utopia—plainly, a perfect world—have a little item in that perfect world that they long for, and that they say you can find in the faery isles of Hawaii, and that is perfect weather! Never hot, never freezing, never sticky, just always a breath from the open door of Paradise!

But Cupid and Cartoonists slide into a panic at the idea of unchanging weather. What would they do if it never did? Landscapes and girls and men would never change. Love would have to go in the same old skin. HE would fall into the megrims if he couldn't dress up. And the picture maker would get a frayed brain and sit staring all day long at an acre of white paper.

But, ah—as it is—Love can change into an Eskimo suit just about the time that both he and the "sketch artists" have exhausted the infinite variety of the "old Davil—Sea." And when the Eskimo suit and the sleighs, and bells, and skating knickers, and frozen moonlights, and coonskin coats, and glassy streets are growing rickety, why then Summer comes over the hill yoo-hooing, and she has with her a whole pedlar's pack of new ideas to choose from—old, yet ever new!

Tulips, commuters' gardens, hammocks, streams to fish in (there, that's a new one—a girl fishing for beaux with her landing net!), cars and moonlit roads, canoes—and the good old green SEA AGAIN! Then Cupid puts on his mackerel tail, and his fin-ish eyebrows, and fins that he never had them on before. And the beach-comber—the artist—takes some more new ideas from the frills of Father Neptune's shirt that he swishes up on the sands on a Summer's day!—NELL BRINKLEY

The Temptress :: :: :: By Ibanez

ROBLEDO spent a bad night. Twice he woke up to find that he was straining to hear the sounds coming from the next room. Muttered words and groans came through the thin walls. . . .

When he came out into the living room he found Watson. Robledo exclaimed cheerfully:

"Up so early? . . . And you got in pretty late last night too . . ."

But Watson seemed to be in low spirits, he offered no explanation beyond saying that as there was no work that day he was going out on a long ride.

Robledo, passing Torre Bianca's bedroom, opened the door and, looking in, uttered an exclamation of astonishment. There was no one in the room.

He noticed some sheets of paper on the table. Robledo picked one of them up. "Thank you for all you have done . . . but I can't go on—" another one began: "The only woman who ever really loved me was my mother, and she is dead. If only I could feel sure of seeing her again——"

At the very hour of the day, near the Rojas ranch, Manos Duras, with his three comrades from the mountains, was stalking in the shade of some bush that grew a little higher than their heads.

The men were holding their horses by their bridles. One of them received Manos Duras' directions, mounted his horse and rode to the Carlos Rojas ranch and left a message as from the comisario to come to La Presa at once to look over the thief who had stolen Rojas' cattle.

Manos Duras and his three companions, lying flat on the ground, saw the rancher go by in the direction of La Presa.

Manos Duras said with characteristic impudence:

"We'll see what he has to say when we have carried off his little heifer."

Watson, who was riding in the vicinity of the ranch, eager to approach it, and yet fearful of arousing Celinda's resentment by his presence, also saw don Rojas pass by, going in the direction of La Presa.

This strengthened his courage. Celinda then was alone at the ranch, and he could invent some pretext for going to see her, perhaps Celinda would come out and get on her horse. He felt disposed to wait at least until sundown.

Meanwhile, his friend Robledo was wandering along the main street of La Presa, head down, absorbed by his reflection. He had just stopped in at his house. Torre Bianca was still not there.

He heard someone calling him. The rancher Rojas was talking excitedly to the comisario, who looked amazed, then bewildered. Robledo walked towards them.

"Someone came to my ranch this morning to tell me that the comisario wanted to see me and return the cow that was stolen from me three days ago . . . And now don Roque says he never sent any such message, and doesn't know anything about this business. Did you ever hear the like? Who could the fellow be who brought the message? . . . I'd like to show him what I think of his joke."

Robledo was not interested.

"It's too bad that Watson went away so early this morning," he thought. "If he were here he would help me look for Federico."

But Watson, far away on the desert, torn between his desire to see Celinda and his fear of being harshly dismissed by her, was little by little approaching the ranch as he rode around it in wide circles.

When, however, he reached the palisades of the Rojas property, he was again torn by indecision. How was he to explain his presence on the ranch grounds when Flor de Rio Negro had ordered him never to come there again?

"No matter what she may say, I'm going in," he decided. "I must see her, even though nothing comes of it but her calling me names . . ."

As he rode slowly forward down the trail leading to the ranch house. Suddenly his horse started and quickened his walk, then stopped abruptly as though about to rear.

Across the path lay the body of a dog recently killed. A few paces farther on he found a man also stretched across the trail. He too was dead. Richard recognized him as one of Don Carlos' half-breed peons.

Watson flung himself down from his horse and holding his revolver in his right hand he made his way toward the house. When he saw no one, he began to call.

The wicker chair in which Celinda usually sat lay overturned on the floor. The cover of the large table had apparently been roughly pulled off and lay on the ground, while the papers and small objects that usually covered it were scattered about under foot.

CODFISH RECIPES

GREETINGS, everybody.

Here's a big vote of thanks for all the good people who yesterday telephoned their appreciation of the new series of economical recipes. If you'll all follow suit and let me know what you would like on your page, I'll try to serve just what is ordered.

Now for some more penny savers. Will those of you who turn up your noses at New England turkey (salt codfish) please lend an ear to this way of preparing the bird.

CODFISH SOUFFLE.

Soak 1 cup of shredded codfish in lukewarm water for 10 minutes; drain and dry thoroughly; mix with 2 cups mashed potato (hot or cold), add yolks of 2 eggs, which have been beaten very light, and 2 tablespoons butter and a dash of pepper. Beat well, and fold in the whites of 2 eggs which have been beaten stiff and dry. Put in a greased baking dish, and bake about 20 minutes in a moderate oven. Half of a green pepper and a slice of onion is delicious chopped and cooked in the butter, and added to the potato and fish.

SPANISH CODFISH

Chop 1 onion and 1 green pepper, and cook in 3 tablespoons of bacon fat about 5 minutes; add 1½ cups of tomatoes and simmer 10 minutes; add ⅔ of a cup salt codfish, which has been flaked and freshened in lukewarm water; add a little salt if necessary. Simmer 2 minutes and serve with border of boiled rice.

MARTHA LEE

BAKED RICE AND HAM

Wash ¼ cup rice, place in greased baking dish; add 2¼ cups stock or hot water, ½ cup cooked ham finely chopped, and 2 cups milk; 1 tablespoon onion finely chopped and 2 tablespoons carrot finely chopped, and salt if necessary. Bake slowly for 3 hours, stirring occasionally during the first hour. Ham stock or corned beef stock may be used, any cooked meat substituted for ham. Serve with boiled spinach or dressed lettuce.

BAKED SPAGHETTI AND HAM

Put 1 cup of cooked spaghetti into a greased baking dish; mix ⅔ of a cup cooked ham finely chopped and one hard cooked egg, chopped, and add half of it to spaghetti; mix 1¼ cups white sauce, made by my time-honored recipe, and 3 tablespoons tomato catsup, and pour half of it over ham and spaghetti; repeat; cover with crumbs, and bake in a hot oven about 15 minutes.

"Strong" for Puffed Wheat—food that tempts with a unique deliciousness

EVERYBODY admires Harrison Wells for his good driving, his courtesy to his passengers, and his carefulness and alertness at all times.

Like scores of other men who use their minds to think, he's careful what sort of food he eats. His usual breakfast choice is the cereal food known as Puffed Wheat.

Puffed Wheat is whole wheat steam exploded to 8 times its normal size, then deliciously oven toasted so that it crunches in your mouth like fresh toast. Experts say it is the most delicious grain food known.

Approximately 20% is bran. But to eat it, you would never guess it. It proves that food that's "good" for you can tempt your palate, too. Supplies minerals and other strength-building properties of whole wheat in amazingly delicious and quickly digestible form.

It's the kind of cereal you want in your home. Try it—see how the family takes to it.

ALREADY, Norway is [illegible] advertising for steam-heated tourists.

THEY want everybody to come to their cool climate where life is bitter.

THE Summer evenings are so chilly that the people have to wear hot water bags for sweaters.

ONE tourist said the only way he could keep warm was to build a fire in his overcoat pocket.

THE Arctic Zone is the region where the nights are six months long. This should be a wonderful inducement for married men who stay out nights.

A BROOKLYN woman said that this would suit her perfectly, as she'd only have to cook two breakfasts a year.

THE Winters up there are so cold that you have to turn [illegible] in [illegible].

LAST Summer an Eskimo stuck his head in one of our refrigerators and thought it was an oil stove.

IN the north, bungalows are made out of ice and the natives use skates for bedroom slippers.

DAILY SHORT STORY

THE BAD MAN

By Mary Henke

TIM MADDEN lowered his newspaper and looked up into the maw of a revolver. Very calmly he raised his newspaper again, read to the end of the paragraph, folded the sheets and [illegible] neatly upon the [illegible]. Then he condescended [illegible] the revolver.

"Put that thing down," he said with contempt. "It sure does give me a pain the green way some people handle a gun nowadays. Put it down." His voice took on a tone of curt command and when the masked figure made no move to comply, Tim sprang to his feet, seized the gun from the futilely resisting fingers and placed it calmly on top of the newspaper.

"I don't believe you ever handled a gun before," he declared, bitterly. "This country is certainly degenerating when it calls cake eaters like you bad men—"

His keen grey eyes surveyed the young, slim figure before him, studied the white uncalloused hands, the gracefully slouching posture of the body. He saw, too, a suspicious bulge in the shirt front. Picking up the revolver he held it, lightly aimed.

"Hand over that loot you've got stuck in your shirt—and don't fool around doing it. I've shot real bad men in my day when I was a sheriff out West. Hurry up."

The masked bandit made a move to comply, then suddenly crumpled into a chair and sank into tears of nervous exhaustion.

Tim Madden lifted his eyes to demand of heaven what the world was coming to.

"If you ain't got a powder puff, I'll lend you one," he said sarcastically.

The masked bandit lifted his head, and with a weary gesture removed his mask. He revealed a pale good-looking face, with a good chin, unhappy, clear-gazing blue eyes. Tim Madden regarded him with interest. Not a bad face at all, this; in other circumstances he fancied he would have liked the boy.

Slowly the boy thrust his hand in his shirt front and took out a chamois bag. He handed it to Tim. The old man opened it and dumped out the contents—pieces of newspaper.

"So——" said Tim softly, "Somebody has double-crossed you."

He studied the boy thoughtfully for a moment. "I reckon you'd better tell me about it," he said.

The boy stammered, incredulous eyes still on the bag. "A fellow I know—older than me—got me to go with him to hold up a bank. We got away all right. He had the money. He said he was giving me half, in that bag. We were to meet in Montreal. He told me to get all the money I could before I came—I was afraid to cash this—I hadn't looked at it—I didn't think he'd do a thing like that to me——"

"Why not?" drawled Tim. "He wasn't so honorable in other ways, was he? The greenness of the present generation just breaks my heart. I reckon you're ready to go to jail, are you?"

"Yes," said the boy, quietly.

Tim reflected. "When I was out West I used to take my prisoners and keep 'em. I don't hold much with these sheriffs they have nowadays. They don't know much more than the bad men. I guess I'll let you serve out your time right here."

"Here!" gasped the boy, his color rising.

"That's what I said," drawled Tim. "I reckon they'd sentence you to fourteen years anyway. I'll be easy with you. We'll say two years' sentence. Prisoner at the bar, have you anything to say?"

"No—no, sir," stammered the prisoner.

"Then tomorrow you can start out digging potatoes. When you get through with that I'll give you something else to do. What's your name, prisoner?"

"Richard Porter."

"I'll assign you to [illegible] you find there what you want. Come on."

He raised his big, wiry frame, strong and supple yet for all his seventy years. The boy looked at him with respect. Docilely he followed up the stairs.

The room was neat and airy, with [illegible] curtains at the windows, shelves of books, a bowl of flowers on the table.

"Hoeing begins at 7 o'clock," said Tim. "You can have breakfast in the kitchen at 6. Good night."

"Good night," the boy answered. Tim closed the door and strode down the hall to his own room.

The next day he watched the boy interestedly from his window. He was evidently unused to such vigorous manual labor and his hands blistered early in the day, but he worked on with a doggedness Tim liked. Tim's pretty young granddaughter, Margot, watched with him.

"Please let him stop," she begged, "he's so tired he's ready to fall over. Let me tell him."

Tim stopped her sternly. "Let him alone. He's got to pay the penalty for his law-breaking. And this will show the stuff that's in him. If he amounts to anything, he'll do the work if it kills him."

The boy came in at six in the evening his hands so blistered and saw that the girl gave a little exclamation of pity. Richard blushed when he saw her and drew back as if to retreat. But Tim said, "You'll eat here with us evenings. Run along and wash. Dinner's almost ready."

Richard went to bed shortly after dinner. He was too tired to talk.

The next day Tim put him to cleaning out the stables. The boy did his task with the same uncomplaining dogged obedience.

"I believe he's got it in him," said Tim with approval.

"Of course he has," returned Margot indignantly.

Tim gave her a shrewd glance. "But don't you be forgetting that he's a bad boy and ought by rights to be in jail."

Margot answered gently: "He's not to blame, Grandfather. His parents died when he was little. He has no one but an aunt, who doesn't care for him."

"How did you know all that?" demanded Tim.

"He told me," she smiled.

"Told you?" he stared. "I'd like to know when?"

It was while she was tying up his blistered hands, but she didn't tell Tim that. She just smiled noncommittally.

"Trust the women," declared Tim. "In ten minutes they have [illegible] secret history out of him. But don't you be talking to him too much, my dear. He may forget his position."

So far as he could tell, she talked with the boy scarcely at all. She was very demure in his presence and the boy awkward and silent before her. From the stables Tim transferred Richard to other tasks around the house, and sometimes sent him out to his farm for a day's work. He wondered sometimes if the boy wouldn't walk off, but he always turned up faithfully in the evenings.

"I'm going to give him a job down at the store," Tim told Margot. "I need a fellow to manage things down there. I believe this fellow can learn."

Margot's eyes glowed, but she tactfully said nothing.

But when Tim broke the news to Richard the next day, he was unpleasantly surprised.

"I wish," said the boy miserably, "you'd let me off, Mr. Madden. I've got to go away."

Tim stared resentfully. "Now what sort of a fool notion have you got?"

"You've been so kind to me," stammered the boy, "that's why I can't stay. You see—it's Margot."

"Oh," said Tim expressively, and added "And how about Margot?"

"I don't know," the boy lifted [illegible] I can't keep [illegible]."

[illegible], he put a gentle hand on the boy's arm. "Then suppose you tell [illegible]," he said, "and afterwards—we'll talk about the job."

COOK-COOS by Ted Cook

American Home League presents statistics showing that the divorce evil is spreading throughout the land.

Why doesn't the league promote a nation-wide "Love Your Wife Week"?

* * *

Of course, there would be isolated protests. Hollywood conservatives might contend that such propaganda is too revolutionary.

* * *

But "Love Your Wife Week" has great possibilities. Every 100 per cent. American could be asked to sign a pledge to kiss his wife.

* * *

Obviously, the big danger is that many women might suffer from the shock. It would be interesting if the United States Health Department would chart the heart failures.

* * *

The difficulty in promoting such reforms would come in the nature of organized protests from the powerful life insurance interests.

"Don't call me stranger!" he pleaded, as the maid opened the closet door.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE—Evelyn McHorseradish comes home with a pearl clothes line and a Rolls-Royce. Her husband, Emerson, becomes suspicious. Now go on with the story—

CHAPTER X.

Emerson's mother paused at the doorstep. She listened, ear to keyhole. All was quiet within, except the peals of hysterical laughter and the crackle of peanut shells.

Concluding that her daughter-in-law was alone, or bad company, Mrs. McHorseradish battered down the door.

Then, crawling on her hands and knees, she went from room to room, and finally found Evelyn huddled in a broom closet, sobbing gleefully.

For a fraction of a second not a word was spoken.

"Tell me," cried Mrs. McHorseradish, in a rasping voice, "all."

Evelyn choked. She was trapped!

"You cheat!" went on the mother, hurriedly.

"What!" smiled Evelyn, whisking away her tears with a whisk-broom—a gift from Ronald Colman.

The mother's face clouded and broke out, rashly.

"Stand aside—you rich man's toy," she twitted.

Evelyn had fainted.

FOXY GRANDPA AND HIS BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

"I DON'T understand it," said Bobby, as we saw some wild pigs in Florida scamper back into the woods at the approach of our automobile. "Why do wild pigs look cleaner than tame pigs, and they never seem to get fat like the pigs that live on farms?"

"That's simple," said Bunny. "When they're out in the open they have the chance to run and get plenty of exercise and then they eat the food they were intended to eat and not a lot of refuse which many farmers feed to their pigs. That's why they roll in the mud."

"What has what they eat and rolling in the mud got to do with it?" asked Bobby, screwing up his little forehead into wrinkles, which he always does when he can't understand something.

"Just this," declared Bunny, "If a pig is fed on proper food, greens and roots, and things which he would naturally eat, his blood doesn't get overheated. But if he's fed on swill he really doesn't feel well, and he's likely to feel overheated and roll in the mire just to cool himself. If he hasn't a shady place in his sty, then he becomes faint and blistered in the hot sun, and rolls in the dirt to get some relief."

"I never knew that," said Bobby.

"And lots of farmers never think of it," snapped Bunny indignantly. "Pigs, naturally, are not dirty animals. It's their keepers that make them so. They're generally misjudged."

As it happened we stopped at a farm-house for some milk, and when we arrived the farmer was sweeping out the pig-sty, and he had let the old pig run loose in the yard while he was house-cleaning.

We stood in the shade of the tree waiting for the farmer to bring the milk and naturally watched the pig. He sniffed around on the ground for a while, and then he made straight for the barn door, which was open only a crack.

He noticed the door open, walked in and in a few moments came out with a bundle of hay in his mouth. He made straight for his sty and placed the bundle of hay in a corner.

After that he made several trips to the barn, bringing back fresh hay each trip and piling it on that which he had brought before.

By this time the farmer had returned with the milk. We each drank a big tin cupful and filled our special bottle. Just then the farmer saw what his old pig had done, and he ran to the sty, picked up the hay and brought it back to the barn.

"Too bad," murmured Bunny, and the pig grunted and looked at Bunny for sympathy.

However, as soon as the farmer started talking to us, the pig ran again to the barn, and again brought fresh hay, and finally the farmer said:

"Well, I reckon I won't carry it back again this time. That hog is certainly set on having a fresh bed. But I shouldn't think a hog would care what he slept on."

Bunny's eyes glared as the farmer uttered these words, and I noticed that when we left Bunny was polite but that was all.

We got into the automobile and as Bunny settled down by my side he slapped his little paw on his right knee and said:

"That just proves my statement. Now you saw how anxious that old fat pig was for a clean bed. He wanted it so badly he even carried it himself, and that farmer hardly had sense enough to know it."

"I'll never say 'as dirty as a pig' again as long as I live," declared Bobby, shaking his little head emphatically.

FOR Acid Stomach PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

BETTER THAN SODA

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this souring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

LUCKY TIGER —HAIR REMEDY—

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

ACROSS the plains the thunder rolls; far off, strange tumult sings. Before the hastening blast the air is thick with frightened wings, as many a bird in terror flees with all his music mute; still now the robin's minstrelsy, the lark's once lovely lute. A shadow spreads along the land as blacker clouds arise that, laced with lightning's fitful glare, blot out the tranquil skies. The aspen and the willow tree bend low in wild alarm as closer, ever closer, press the awful wings of storm! A force, a power is 'round us now no man could brave or breast, resistless as the giant waves on ocean's wind-lashed crest. Yet even here the trusting soul can have no fear of harm, secure with One who walks the waves and rides the wings of storm.

CHANGE ever is the way of life; no man is standing still, and each is surely going down or climbing up the hill. Each one is gaining as he goes some longed-for goal and good, or each is seeing hopes depart and toil misunderstood. For ceaselessly this old world spins and every hour brings change; man lingers not in well known ways, each path is new and strange. And well it is that this is so, that struggle should not end; but every one keeps striving on till final shades descend. The sweetest part of life always is in the conflict keen, in sense of power the effort brings, not idle hours between. And so, since change must surely come, choose now an upward way; play still a brighter, better part with every passing day.

BOSTON RADIO AMERICAN

VOICING THE GREAT DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

SAMUEL CURTIS, JR., Radio Editor

LARGEST ORGAN AT WBBM

The designer of the organ is Mr. Dan Barton, who has probably had more experience in designing broadcasting organs than any other man in America. His first broadcasting organ was installed at a station in Fort Worth, Texas.

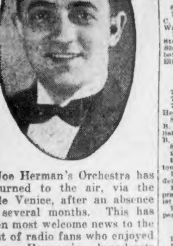
The new organ contains all the improvements and ideas that have come from radio broadcasting of organ music and is the result of four years of experimental work. It has been especially designed for WBBM.

In discussing the new organ, Mr. Barton brought out a number of novel points:

"An organ is entirely different to a radio audience than to an audience listening direct to the same instrument," he said. "The tones of an organ are produced throughout seven octaves of the musical scale which produces vibrations ranging from the very slow ones in the base octaves to the very fast ones in the high treble octave, and inasmuch as the microphone picks up the high vibrations much more readily than those of the lower tones, it is impossible to properly broadcast the ordinary organ because the high notes predominate. Therefore the melody stands out over and above the accompaniment, and the pedal notes are seldom heard.

"The mechanical noises in the operation of the organ such as the movement of the swell shades and tremolos which ordinarily are not heard are a considerable factor in broadcast organs, for these noises are in the higher registers and the microphone readily picks them up. The organ at WBBM is designed to give the same satisfactory results to the radio listener as though he were actually at the place where the organ is being played."

Joe Herman



Joe Herman's Orchestra has returned to the air, via the Lido Venice, after an absence of several months. This has been most welcome news to the host of radio fans who enjoyed Joe Herman's broadcasts through WEEI.

The Lido Venice Orchestra consists of ten men, each man a soloist on his particular instrument, and it is their earnest desire to give the public something "different" in the line of dance music. They now broadcast through WNAC, twice a week, direct from the Lido Venice.

Radio Queries

Q.—A. N. V., Belmont. I have just purchased a Radiola Super Eight, with enclosed loop and speaker. The man I bought it from told me I would have to put in new tubes, as the old ones were worn out. I bought six new ones, and put them in. After running the set for three and one-half hours, I discovered that the music faded away, and I could only bring it in again by advancing the filament rheostat. Within three nights after trying this, I now find it necessary to turn the rheostat all the way on. New dry cells make no difference. What can be wrong?

A.—In putting in the new six tubes, you probably didn't match them up correctly. Buy another set of tubes, or have your old ones reactivated and match them up in the set.

Q.—W. D. S., Boston. I have a two tube home-made set. I get very good distance up to 1200 miles, but get all kinds of squawks and squeals when I take my hand away from the dial. Can you tell me in your Radio Queries column how to stop this? I use an inside aerial, C299 tubes, 1 45-volt B battery, 3 dry cells and a number 10 grid leak.

A.—You say you are using a "number 10 grid leak." I presume by this, you mean a 10 megohm grid leak. Well, it appears Mr. W. D. S., that by using such a high resistance leak, you are operating your detector tube at an extremely critical point. This would enable you to get very good results in bringing in distance, but usually at a considerable sacrifice in stability of operation. About the only remedy, is to be satisfied with less distance, and put in a lower resistance leak. Shielding your set carefully might help, but under the circumstances you would probably find that, even with shielding, a moderate crash of static would be apt to start your set howling through causing the detector tube to "slop over."

NEW ENGLAND'S SHOE MAKERS KEEP AHEAD

BY FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

Gov. Winant
(Kimball Studio)

If you are one of those who sit back gloomily and declare that the shoe industry in New England is "all done" you ought to read what Governor John G. Winant of New Hampshire has to say about it. If you are not in the class above named, you will want to read the governor's views anyway.

• • •

Says Governor Winant: The management of many of the shoe plants of New Hampshire have realized that to retain the commanding position in the industry, advanced methods both in manufacturing and distribution must be applied vigorously. As a result in many cases overhead cost per pair has been lowered. Time consumed in manufacture has been greatly shortened thereby reducing the inventory and giving better service. Production per worker per pair has been in some cases greatly increased.

• • •

"The style factor in footwear has a greater selling value than ever. New England has always been an acknowledged leader in this respect due to the skilled workers located here and to the designing ability of the management as a result of long years of experience. It definitely appears that the leading merchants of the country are looking to New England for merchandise with outstanding style appeal.

• • •

"New England with 7 per cent. of the population produces over 35 per cent. of the shoes. Of course Massachusetts produces the largest volume in New England. New Hampshir, however, ranks second and is fast taking her place alongside of Massachusetts in establishing a reputation of producing correct merchandise with style appeal.

• • •

"To confirm this opinion, New Hampshire will surely produce in 1926 and 1927 more shoes than ever before manufactured in this State."

• • •

At annual meeting of United States Smelting, Refining & Mining Company in Portland four directors whose terms expired this year were re-elected. The vacancy created by the death of James J. Storrow is to be filled later by the directors.

• • •

Another hearing is to be given on the proposed increase in freight rates on textile goods moving over the New England railroads. In New York trunk line representatives sit with the New England line freight agents. May 21 a special committee of representatives of the railroads in New England and in trunkline territory will have an executive session in New York to determine what action to take relative to the new rate proposal, in view of the strong protest that has come from the textile mills.

• • •

Hornblower & Weeks have leased 40 per cent. of second floor of No. 2 East Fifty-seventh street building, New York, now under construction. Office will serve as branch for this big brokerage firm. Lease is for ten years, with rental aggregating more than $500,000.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY MAKING RETRENCHMENT

New York, May 20.—Automotive Industries this week will say:

Although a few of the motor car factories have increased production slightly in the last two weeks, the majority are either maintaining schedules at levels previously established or are gradually curtailing. Current shipments by equipment makers are lower than they were a month or six weeks ago, clearly indicating retrenchment by the car manufacturers. At the same time, it cannot be ignored that rather heavy stocks of parts and semi-finished vehicles were accumulated during the early months of the year, and part of the shipments of the last month have involved a considerable reduction in inventories.

From now on output will be closely dependent upon the state of the retail market and stocks in dealers' hands.

FARMERS GAIN $250,000. IN HARVESTER DEALS

Private dispatches received in Wall Street from Des Moines state the International Harvester Company sold farm implements to Iowa farmers this Spring, valued at $1,000,000 and accepted corn in payment at one dollar a bushel. At present prices the farmers were said to be $250,000 ahead and the Harvester Company that much out.

Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation, organized in 1916, is one of the largest of the Cuban producers of raw sugar.

It owns or leases a total acreage of almost 785,000 acres and also owns its railway lines and equipment.

During the ten years ending in September, 1925, net profits amounted to an annual average of about 7 per cent. on the 7 per cent. preferred stock and to only 27 cents a share on the common stock.

In 1923 earnings were equal to $6.67 per share on the common stock, this figure dwindling to $2.86 in 1924 and to nothing in the fiscal year, 1925.

Despite a falling off in earning power, however, the financial condition of the company at the time of last report was fair since current assets were over twice as great as current liabilities.

Because of no payments since 1921, accumulated dividends on the preferred stock now amount to 35 per cent.

No dividend has ever been paid on the common stock.

FINANCE

By B. C. FORBES

Atlantic City, May 20.—The brains of the electric light and power industry are gathered here. The members of the National Electric Light Association, in annual convention, are happy.

They are congratulating themselves in the remarkable growth and prosperity of their industry. There is genuine rejoicing over the achievements in winning the goodwill of the public, in distributing very widely utility securities among customers, in gaining a larger measure of employe loyalty, in obtaining almost universal fair play from State regulatory bodies, in engineering and other technical triumphs, and especially in linking up power plants over a large part of of the continent by means of interconnected facilities, popularly but incorrectly called "super-power."

It must be admitted that our public utility leaders have done better than any other class of employers in educating the public during recent years to a better understanding of their problems, functions and usefulness, in attracting enormous numbers of local householders as stock-owners, and in combatting old-time prejudices.

But—Success brings obligations. The strongest men in the public utility world are felicitating themselves particularly upon the success already attained and within sight in corralling scores and hundreds of small, weak companies and merging them into strong, powerful corporations, and in extending inter-connected facilities.

Having been accorded the privilege of addressing the convention, I took the liberty of sounding a word of warning as to the new responsibility this new success will bring.

As I see it, inter-connection and consolidation will make it necessary for utility giants to exercise greater zeal than ever before to win the confidence of consumers, investors, the general public and the politicians, to convince the voters all over the country that the innumerable consolidations were dictated less by a mercenary desire to make stock market profits than by a sincere desire to render the homes and farms and the workshops of the United States better service at lower cost.

Happily, many of the foremost men in the utility industry are progressives, not stand-patters. They realize the vital importance not only of treating the public fairly in the matter of rates and service but of taking pains to acquaint the rank and file of the people with all phases of their operations.

The engineering problems of interconnection will easily be taken care of. The new offerings of securities incidental to consolidations will easily be marketed.

But—and here is the "but" that needs to be emphasized—will there be exercised the endless thought and energy and ability which will be necessary to convince beyond question the great majority of householders, citizens, voters, that mergers on a scale never before dared were and are genuinely in the public interest, beneficial to the humblest housewife, to the rank and file of breadwinners, to our agricultural population, to customer-owners and other small owners of public utility stocks, to utility employes, to taxpayers, to all?

Utility giants are playing for big stakes. Will they win? I believe they will, provided they take the proper pains to play fairly and far-sightedly.

WEQUAQUET PINENEEDLES
CAPE COD

On Saturday, May 22nd, we will open for inspection our beautiful Wequaquet Pineneedles at Wequaquet Heights on Wequaquet Lake, the largest lake on Cape Cod. One and one-half miles of rare water front, located in Centerville, centered in the heart of the greatest playground of New England.

Near Craigville, the fourth finest beach in the world. Two miles from Hyannis. Three miles from Wianno and close to four golf clubs.

This beautiful high land, of sturdy pines, surrounding a lake of spring water, clear as crystal, with fine white sand beach shores, affording a safe place for children to bathe. Good fishing, splendid boating, bridle paths and pine needle hiking, trails of rare beauty.

The owner has reserved certain sections to be used for tennis courts, croquet grounds, rustic summer house, settees, bathing beaches and sand pits that will attract the children and make them happy.

Note—The drinking water on this wonderful development is beyond a doubt a marvelous asset for the welfare of owners who are now preparing to build. This will interest every prospective buyer as good spring water of the kind found at Wequaquet Heights is nature's medicine.

You are cordially invited to inspect this property and our representatives will be on the grounds to render every possible assistance.

No effort will be made to sell lots on this opening day, but selections can be made and orders will be taken.

Come to Centerville. Follow the Red, White and Green Arrows to Wequaquet Heights or Shootflying Hill

Self-Government Best

Greatest Ills Come From Government Not Freely Chosen

Every sharply contested primary election, like the one Tuesday in Pennsylvania, is followed by demands for return to the convention system.

Direct primaries, we are assured, are "costly," "disappointing," "breeders of dissension." Their repeal is urged on the plea that the convention system is "more efficient."

All these contentions may be admitted, yet they fall short of making out a case.

Nominations to office, behind closed doors, by agents of privileges seated around a table, are also costly, disappointing and liable to breed dissension, however superior in efficiency from the standpoint of the beneficiaries.

They load the costs, disappointments and dissensions upon the people, whose offices they usurp, and the people have no redress.

The problem boils down to whether Americans want imposed-government or self-government.

Imposed-government, gaining ground in Europe, has many admirers here. They are quick to detect and exaggerate the ills of democracy, at the same time forgetting the greater ills which, in the long run, come from government not freely chosen.

Historically, ours has been an experiment in self-government, not perfect, but well approved by its results.

The direction of progress is not back to outgrown abuses, but forward to new triumphs.

How to Get Out the Vote

Dig Up a "Moral Issue"

Before you make any predictions upon the result of the November elections in Massachusetts it may be well to reflect that the Fall campaigns are likely to be advanced or embarrassed by a so-called "moral" issue. The question of Sunday baseball has been referred by the Legislature to the people.

One thing alone appears to be almost certain and that is that this issue will bring to the polls every Massachusetts voter who can be lifted into an automobile and is strong enough to hold a lead pencil.

The friends of Sunday observance will see to "getting out the vote" this year, and DON'T worry about THAT.

'One Profit,' the Man Said

Right as Rain!

This happened in Providence, but something like it may be taking place in YOUR street.

A polite gentleman appeared at the door with samples of women's undergarments. He represented, he said, a New Jersey textile mill, able to sell direct to the consumer at prices considerably below those quoted in the stores because it was "cutting out the middleman."

His samples looked so good that several Providence housewives were glad to make "deposits." Some paid as little as $4 "down," a few as much as $20.

The gentleman's emphasis was upon the fact that there was to be but ONE PROFIT. There was.

That is all there is to this little story; there isn't any more. The Better Business Bureau has been called in, and once again attention is directed to its famous slogan, "Before you invest, investigate."

Those Friends Thou Hast

"Grapple Them to Thy Soul With Hoops of Steel"

Mellie Dunham, in Portland with "Gram" and his fiddle "for one week, only," on the way back to Norway, Maine, has discovered in his first season on the road the "only trouble with the show business."

It has nothing to do with "morals"; Mellie found the folks back stage the most considerate of mortals and the most delightful of companions; no more immoral or unmoral than people in any other walk of life.

The only trouble with the show business, this backwoods philosopher says, is that SATURDAY NIGHT ALWAYS COMES.

"I have made a lot of friends in every city I've been in and Saturday night I have to leave them. I'll be glad to get home, but I hate to leave so many nice folks. But then, that's the way of life. Saturday night ALWAYS comes and you have to leave the friends you've made!"

If we take the schoolboy's definition, that a friend is "a fellow that knows all about you, but likes you," Mr. Dunham was speaking of ACQUAINTANCES rather than friends, but there is, nevertheless, a suggestion for all of us in the reflection of the Oxford County pundit that "Saturday night always comes."

Pensioning Mothers

Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the former President, is devoting her energies toward the movement for pensioning mothers. She is championing the bill in Congress whereby the District of Columbia pensions mothers, a measure which is to be a model for all the States of the Union.

The community has long recognized its duty of caring for children who are not properly supported. Orphan asylums exist everywhere. There are those, however, who look with suspicion upon any institution. The best of all institutions, and the first, is the home, and no substitute is entirely satisfactory.

Instead of supporting these children, therefore, in some communal building, it is proposed to enable mothers to keep their children and bring them up properly.

The idea should commend itself to the common sense of people everywhere.

Indeed, in a time when many tendencies are eating into the home as our fathers knew it, the restoration and preservation of that incomparable unit of society become more than ever a public duty.

SIMPLE RULES TELL HOW TO BE UGLY

By DR. FRANK CRANE

MRS. RUTH J. MAURAR, speaking before the National School of Cosmeticians, whatever that may be, in Los Angeles recently, said:

"A great many people apparently want to be ugly, and I have devoted some attention to telling them how to accomplish this purpose."

The rules laid down by Mrs. Maurar have the advantage of being practical and clear. If any woman wants to be a fright or to have such features and complexion as shall make men shun her, all she has to do is to read, mark, learn and inwardly digest the following advice given by this expert:

First, she is to use soap night and morning for washing her face, always scrubbing vigorously, thus leaving the skin dry and harsh.

Second, she is to avoid carefully the use of creams which the skin may demand at night and never use any cream of any sort before applying powder.

She is to insist upon being natural. That is, she is to refuse to powder, and she is to expose herself as much as she can to the sun so she will get tanned and sun burned, thus dilating the blood vessels and producing the coarse, weather-beaten effect known as "sailors' skin."

Fourth, she is to shampoo her hair with strong alkaline soaps so as to keep it fluffy. She is to use various bleaching compounds and poor hair dyes, followed immediately by a marcel wave with a very hot iron.

She is to play golf and tennis and to take long walks and motor rides without a hat.

She must never use sun glasses. Instead, she should squint and scowl habitually.

She is to drink cocktails, highballs and synthetic gin.

The next rule is to smoke one or two packages of cigarettes a day, being careful to inhale. Thus she will stain the finger tips and discolor the teeth.

She must keep late hours. Make it a rule to play cards and dance every night until nervously exhausted.

She must get nervous and be as disagreeable as she feels; also cultivate a chronic fault-finding disposition. This will aid in making lines about the mouth and the forehead.

If one wants to keep the men away or at a safe distance these seem to be pretty good rules to follow.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"AND what can you do?" I said, trying to get behind her shyness. "I can't help you find a position unless you tell me what work you wish."

For a long minute she looked at me in a sort of helpless wonder. There was a peculiar confusion about her sensitive, middleaged face and slender, shabby body. She was like a timid traveler who has wandered into a menacing, foreign land.

"Why—why I can do almost anything," she said at last.

"Just what does 'almost anything' mean?" I smiled, trying to make it easier for her. I had heard that answer before. I know the tragedy that lay behind it—and ahead of it. "Can you use a type-estate—do nursing—"

"Maybe I could do some nursing. Or plain cooking. Or I could look after babies. You see—I've always been a home body. And Jim and I—we were married twenty years ago last May. We had three. So I know about children. But now Jim's gone—"

She stopped. The cords in her throat began to quiver and a red splotch spread across the faded flesh. She tried to go on—then suddenly her head went forward and she seemed to wither within herself. She had fainted.

She Sought Work

She had fainted because Jim was gone and there were three helpless children. She had walked the streets for a week looking for work. For three days she had eaten little but tea and toast. She had come to the end of her strength.

This is not a "sob story." It is the truthful record of one of our commonest tragedies. Thousands of Jims are dying monthly in this country, leaving middle-aged, untrained wives and helpless children without a cent.

"There was enough while Jim lived!" they cry.

But out of that "enough" not a cent was laid away as a bulwark against that black day to come. And when that day comes, the broken wife gropes helplessly for some way to hold the home together. Surely there's a place for her—folks always liked her devil cake and corn bread, and she could make an old dress over so it almost looked like new. Or take care of sick folks—or fuss around a garden—all that endless service which had filled her years of wifehood and motherhood, surely the world needs that service now.

But the world doesn't need that service now.

It has scant place for middle-aged, faded women who can "do most anything"—plain sewing, home cooking, fussing around gardens and babies. No matter how eager they are, or how terrible the need that drives them, the world doesn't want them.

Vitality Is Need

The world wants young, brisk women—women whose hearts aren't drained by care and grief—women who have been trained to do one job with the maximum of speed and efficiency. It wants such young women, not because the world is hard-hearted, but because the world is busy and must get the most done in the shortest possible time.

So Jim's wife walks the streets and faints at last in a stranger's chair. And Jim could have prevented it all by putting aside a little in the days when there was "enough."

This isn't insurance propaganda. It's a cry against a heart-breaking tragedy. Never has business speeded up as it has in the last twenty years—never have homes been so insecure—never have humans had to readjust themselves so quickly to new ends. But Jim's wife hasn't made that readjustment. How could she? She was too busy making shortcake for Jim and the babies. And now Jim has gone—

I wonder if Jim sees her fainting in my chair?

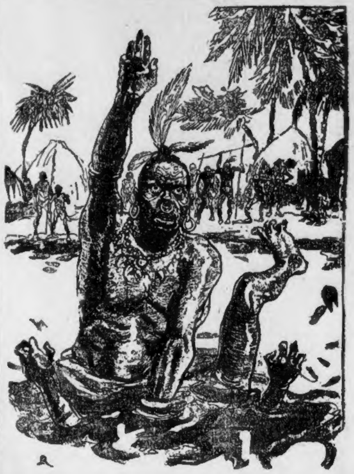
The Flesh Is Willing but the Mind Is Weak

Each Should Receive Only That Which He Is FIT to Receive



This gentleman with his hand raised is Tomo, an African of Rhodesia, baptizing one of his brethren and drowning him at the same time. Too MUCH enthusiasm here.

The American Weekly, which is part of every Sunday edition of the Hearst newspapers, publishes few articles more interesting than the one from which the above illustration is taken.

It tells of an African savage, Tomo, who heard the missionaries preach about baptism, heard that the baptized man WENT STRAIGHT TO HEAVEN, and made up his mind that it was a good deal of an honor to baptize other people and send them to heaven. Thereupon he proceeded TO DO BOTH. Baptized them, then drowned them.

Tomo took his converted brethren, one after the other, twenty-three of them in all, grabbed each one by the throat—a powerful, gigantic man is Tomo, as you see in the picture. Having grabbed the convert to be baptized, Tomo pushed the fortunate or unfortunate—as you may choose to say—person underneath the water, saying, "I baptize thee in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."

Having baptized the convert, Tomo held him down until he was drowned, and, according to Tomo's firm conviction, on his way straight to heaven.

WHEN TWO UGLY TEMPERS CROSS EACH OTHER

You are horror-stricken sometimes when you think of what might be the results of some of your family quarrels.

You are still more affected when you realize that you have reached degrees of anger when you almost inflicted serious injury upon those you hold nearest and dearest.

You shrink from yourself when you remember how diabolical were your own thoughts at some of those angry periods.

You are the sort that loses all thought of consequences when you are very angry, your only desire is to administer bodily injury.

This ought to be lesson enough to you to control your rage.

If you have a help-meet who has a quick temper, isn't it all the more necessary for you to guard your own?

At least you should not assist in creating aggravation.

You know of homes where there is forbearance and happiness and co-operation. Yours can be that way also if you control yourself better.

'You Said It, Marceline!'

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "HOW WOMEN TIP"

When it comes TO TIPPING,
WOMEN are pretty CLOSE
To being AMUSING.
A GIRL NATURALLY
Admires a MALE ESCORT
Who is LIBERAL and
Pays in the GRAND MANNER
For ORDINARY SERVICE.
It makes HER feel
Important.
But the SAME girl will Think NOTHING of Giving A BELLBOY a sweet
Smile for CHASING HER
ALL ROUND the hotel.
MOST women do not think
MUCH of TIPPING.
Perhaps that is why
SOME will tip a
Waiter A QUARTER,
Then WAIT fo rhim
To hold their coat
And LATER,
Gixe a TAXI DRIVER
TEN CENTS—and RUN.
WHY RUN?
It is amusing, but
A MAN WOULD HAVE TO LAUGH OUT LOUD before
ANY WOMAN would ever
GUESS he was SMILING
